Sinden Somewhat Perplexed

Canadians Miss Chances, Wilt

By IAN MacLAINE

WINNIPEG (CP) — Russia's ability to turn Canadian manpower plays to their advantage in Wednesday night's 4-4 tie with Team Canada left Canadian coach Harry Sinden somewhat perplexed.

"They always seem to have a man deep when they're killing penalties," Sinden said in a post-game interview of goals by Vladimir Petrov and Valery Kharlamov that enabled the speedy Russians to pull out the tie.

That, and the superb goaltending of 20-year-old Vladislav Tretiak, deadlocked the eight-game exhibition hockey series at one game each and a tie with game four in Vancouver Friday night.

"It was no different than the first two games," Sinden observed. "They made certain plays out of their own end that just seemed to click."

Sinden, who has developed a lot of respect for the Russian team in the three games, said the Canadians missed several opportunities to wrap the game up while leading 4-2 when Phil Esposito missed "a couple of good shots and then Frank Mahovlich walked in and missed."

When Paul Henderson had his point-blank shot from close in gloved "by a guy (Tretiak) who's not supposed to have a good glove," the Canadians seemed to wilt early in the third period.

With the Russians continually pressing, it was Tony Esposito's opportunity to rise to the occasion and the younger brother of highscoring Phil Esposito repelled the visitors in the final 20 minutes.

One of the big differences in the Soviet offence Wednesday was the appearance of their kid line, seeing action on the Canadian tour for the first time.

The trio of 21-year-olds, Vyacheslav Anisin, Alexander Bodunov and Yuri Lebedev, more than made up for the benching of seasoned veterans Eugeny Zimin and Yuri Blinov.

Lebedev and Bodunov scored the third and fourth Russian goals late in the second period and free-wheeled

Virgin Islands

Snipers Kill Eight

CHRISTIANSTED, St. Croix, V. I. (UPI) — Eight persons, four of them tourists, were shot to death Wednesday at the plush Fountain Valley Golf Course near this small Virgin Islands city when two men opened fire with automatic rifles.

Residents of the island were ordered to remain indoors as police reinforcements from neighboring islands were flown in to help in a manhunt for the two killers.

According to some witnesses, the men picked off their victims both inside and outside the clubhouse with high-powered rifles from a clump of bushes.

Another unofficial version said the men first demanded money and when they did not get it, they opened fire with automatic rifles.

Gov. Melvin Evans, who Wednesday was elected vice chairman of the southern governors' conference in South Carolina, flew home late Wednesday after he was advised of the slayings.

The shooting took place in mid-afternoon at the course, which is owned by the Rockefeller family and considered one of the 12 finest golf courses in the U.S. The links are about eight miles west of Christiansted, the principal city of the island with a population of about 3,000. St. Croix is the largest of the U.S. Virgin Islands.

Police fanned out over the island late Wednesday and the public safety department asked the government of Puerto Rico and police from nearby St. Thomas for aid. Police helicopters were being flown from Puerto Rico. St. Croix's police force normally numbers 100.

Christiansted was virtually closed down under a state of emergency. All public places, including restaurants and movie theatres, shut their doors for the night.

Lt. Gov. David Maas went on television shortly after the shooting to urge Virgin Island residents to help in the capture of the two men by supplying any information that might lead to their arrest.

Police said the gunmen apparently were two fugitives wanted for some time.

A spokesman said they were believed to have fled toward the hilly central spine of the island and it was feared that if they were not apprehended before morning, they could hole up in a remote, uninhabited region indefinitely.

Bomb Kills Woman, Mobs Loot

BELFAST (UPI) — Gunmen bombed the Belfast home of a prominent Roman Catholic politician early this morning, killing a woman in the house. Residents in other sections of the city found the bodies of two executed men.

The three deaths brought to 552 the number of persons killed in three years of violence in Northern Ireland. The toll includes 384 civilians, 122 British soldiers, 21 militiamen and 25 policemen.

The army said a duffle bag packed with explosives was flung from a car at the front door of the home of James O'Kane, chairman of Northern Ireland's Republican Labor Party, in the mixed Catholic-Protestant Antrim Road district.

O'Kane's wife Josephine and their four children escaped injury but Bridget Green, a Catholic housewife and relative of the O'Kanes, died in the blast which caused extensive damage to the front of the house, an army spokesman said. O'Kane was not home.

Protestant mobs early today looted shops and stoned British troops and Catholic homes in Belfast, spokesmen said.

An estimated 1,000 Protestants roamed through the predominantly Protestant eastern and northern sections of the capital during the night. Some mobs looted shops, smashing their windows to get at the merchandise.

Other mobs hurled stones and bottles at army patrols in the districts and through windows of isolated Catholic homes there.

Residents in the Catholic Falls Road area said an unidentified body was dumped from a passing car into an alley there. Troops called to the scene said the man had been shot in the head.

Police said another unidentified man was later found dying from gunshot wounds in the Protestant Woodstock Road area of the capital.

On Wednesday a man was killed in a bomb blast touched off despite reports the Irish Republican Army provisional wing might stop bombings.

Also on Wednesday, a "spigot bomb" fired by shotgun at British soldiers went wild and exploded in an area used by some spastic and paraplegic patients on the grounds of Belfast's Royal Victoria Hospital. No one was injured.

Thousands in Kampala

Asians Line Up for Canada

KAMPALA, Uganda (UPI) — Thousands of Asians lined up outside Canada's temporary immigration office Wednesday when it opened its doors to prospective immigrants.

About 2,000 Asians waited for forms on which to apply for Canadian residence. Most of them were young people, many holding degrees or professional qualifications.

Zavie Levine, special assistant to Canada's minister of manpower and immigration, said Canada would accept all those Asians who could satisfy the immigration selection criteria. These are based on such things as age, educational and occupational qualifications and "immigrant suitability," he said.

Near the Canadian office, a much shorter line waited for British entry permits at the British commission's emergency processing office in the same building. Only about one in six were British passport holders. The others in line were either Ugandan citizens, or Asians whose Ugandan citizenship had been revoked.

The Ugandan citizens of Asian descent said they wanted to leave because they felt that they were no longer wanted in Uganda.

Speaking to a group of visiting Scandinavian newsmen, the Zambian president said, "What is happening in Uganda is very shameful not only for Africa, but for the rest of the world."

Dredger Sinks, Sixteen Drown

HELSINKI (UPI) — A 60-year-old dredging vessel capsized and sank early Wednesday during a storm in the Gulf of Bothnia, trapping most of the sleeping crew of 20 below decks, the coast guard said.

Authorities said 16 of the crewmen were feared dead. The dredger Nostaja went down so fast that only four men woke up and were able to escape and swim ashore.

Rescue ships found two bodies during the day but the 14 others were feared to have been trapped inside the dredger which sank in more than 30 feet of water.

"We have lost all hope of finding any of the 14 alive. The dredger went down in two minutes and apparently took all of them down," a spokesman of the coast guard said.

Divers tried to get down to the dredger but rough seas prevented their attempts all through the day, the spokesman said.

Hurricane Brewing

MIAMI (UPI) — Tropical storm Dawn, fourth of the season, developed Wednesday out of a depression drifting northeastward off the Cape Kennedy spaceport and forecasters said it would become a hurricane by today.

"Highest sustained winds are 50 miles per hour near the centre but will gradually increase as the storm becomes a hurricane," a late advisory from the National Hurricane centre said.

Koreans To Quit Vietnam

SEOUL (UPI) — South Korea will withdraw all of its 37,000 soldiers from South Vietnam starting in December, a high-ranking foreign ministry official said Thursday.

The official said South Korea informed the Saigon government Wednesday of the withdrawal plan, which was completed after full consultations with the United States.

He said the troop pullout plan is final and would not be modified. He did not say how long it will take to complete the withdrawal.

The official said Lt. Gen. Lee Sae-Ho, commander of the Korean forces in South Vietnam, is working on the government plan. The exact time schedules will be set on recommendations from Lee.

The official said South Korea made the decision in the belief that the South Vietnamese forces are strong enough to withstand any North Vietnamese offensive.

"We believe they do not need our help any longer. They proved their self-defensive capabilities last spring when they successfully repelled the communist offensive," he said.

Heart-Lung Program Set

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A three-year, $1.3 billion program to fight heart and lung disease was given final congressional approval Wednesday. The Senate passed the measure providing for programs for diagnosis, prevention and treatment of diseases of the heart, lungs, the blood and blood vessels.

Duke of Alba Dies in U.S.

HOUSTON (UPI) — Don Luis Martinez de Irujo y Artzcoz, Duke of Alba, died of leukemia here Wednesday, a family spokesman said.

The Duchess of Alba will return to Madrid with the 52-year-old Duke's body today, the spokesman said.

Games Must Go On, Brundage Says

Angry Israelis Sit on Their Hands

MUNICH — This Olympic city joined a shocked world in honoring 11 dead Israelis Wednesday.

Then it hastened back to the playing field, trying to forget an Olympian tragedy.

Bright sunshine filtered through the modernistic plastic roof of the Olympic Stadium as some 80,000 Germans, led by their president and chancellor, filed solemnly in for the memorial ceremony designed to write "finis" to the incredible and almost unbelievable happenings which started at dawn Tuesday.

When the Tuesday tragedy ended, 17 persons lay dead, including a West German policeman and five of eight Arab terrorists. All but two of them died in a blaze of gunfire in the darkness at the airport of Fuerstenfeldbrueck, some 30 miles west of Munich.

The tragedy remained clouded in doubt as to why the Germans took such risks with innocent lives. But nothing clouded the sentiments which rang through the stadium Wednesday.

"Hate only destroys," cried West German President Gustav Heinemann. "In the name of the German government, I appeal to all people: Help us to overcome hate."

Not far away, at No. 31 Connollystrasse in the Olympic Village, three bouquets of flowes marked the scene where eight members of the Palestinian Black September organization broke in at dawn, killing two Israelis outright and holding nine hostages for 17 hours.

The Israelis, about 40 strong, filed into the place of honor on the stadium turf. Many were weeping openly, and one girl had to be supported.

They joined in the applause when President Heinemann said Arab countries who support terrorists must share the blame for this tragedy, the worst ever to befall the Olympic Games.

But they sat on their hands, and anger blazed in the eyes of some, as Olympic committee president Avery Brundage declared, "The games must go on!"

Israel, Egypt and Syria pulled out of the games Wednesday, the Egyptians saying they were doing so for their own security. But their flags were among those of 121 nations which flew at half mast at the stadium.

A few hours later, the games were resumed — but not until a bomb scare forced officials to clear and search the hall where a handball match between Romania and Hungary was due to take place. The games will now finish Monday, one day behind schedule.

A full day after the chaos and confusion ended in gunsmoke, the full details were still not clear. The Germans were interrogating the three surviving Arabs, but refused to release any information about them — even their names.

In a 3 a.m. press conference Wednesday, German officials tried to justify their action at Fuerstenfeldbrueck, where they ordered sharpshooters to open fire on the Arabs in deep darkness as they transferred their hostages to a waiting Lufthansa jet. The action was necessary, the Germans alleged, because certain death awaited the hostages if they left German soil.

This still has not been explained, but the Israelis have decided not to protest the action which cost the nine hostages their lives. In a restrained note, Israeli premier Golda Meir thanked Chancellor Willy Brandt for the unsuccessful efforts to rescue the hostages.

"The Germans did what they could," said Yitzak Fuchs, leader of the Israeli team here. "We cannot criticize them."

Younger Israelis did not openly contradict him, and appeared to be acting under instructions not to raise a fuss. But many Germans were becoming openly nervous about the tragedy.

Even President Heinemann indicated his doubts whether the right course was followed. "Would it have been possible to prevent the attack and its consequences?" he asked.

"No one can give a definitive answer at this time."

"It is practically impossible to say which alternative would have been better," added Hans-Joachim Vogel, the Munich mayor who planned the games.

The doubts were more sharply expressed by Abendzeitung, a newspaper generally friendly to Willy Brandt. "Why did they delay so long in telling the public the bitter truth?" it asked.

"Why did they criminally permit the Israeli government to express thanks for the liberation of the hostages when they knew long before that they were all dead?"

These questions have yet to be answered. The government is still maintaining its blackout.

Naturally this has not halted speculation as to why the government first said the hostages appeared to be safe in the shoot-out, then waited four hours to reluctantly announce that most or all had died. It wasn't until early Wednesday that it decided all had died.

One theory was that the Germans were desperately anxious that the games be continued, and feared that if the extent of the disaster were known, it would influence the International Olympic Committee, which at that time was debating whether to resume the games after Wednesday's memorial services.

The IOC gave its approval for the games to start up again. By then it was too late and too embarrassing to reverse themselves had they wanted to, or been forced to by public pressure. The issue or continuing or breaking off the games appeared to split teams here and the German public as well.

Said one Bavarian: "The Games must go on. We must remain strong."

But a Munich woman countered: "The Germans will never learn. I am sorry."

But at the same time, many spoke out against any measures which would enhance the reputation of the Arab guerrillas. If the games were halted, the Arabs would hasten to take credit for it.

In Bonn, the West German government met in the aftermath and approved a plan for the European community to go to the United Nations with a new proposal to control international terrorism. The Munich tragedy was not directly its responsibility, since security is in the hands of the local states here, in this case, Bavaria.

But federal interior minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher was the chief German negotiator with the Arab guerrillas, and the action plan which resulted in the Fuerstenfeldbrueck bloodbath was approved on the federal, state and local levels. When and if the recriminations start flooding in, Brandt's government will share the public blame at a time when he can least afford it.

He is entering the final stretch of an election campaign, which even without the Olympic tragedy could see him thrown out of office. But so far it hasn't come to this: The Germans — politicians, press and public alike — are still too shocked by the Olympian tragedy of Tuesday and early Wednesday.

in the Canadian zone throughout the third period.

"We played them to get some experience for the young kids," said Coach Vsevolod Bobrov of his experiment to shake the Russian club up following Monday's 4-1 loss at Toronto.

"That is why we brought them to this country. It was not just our aim to win."

And Bobrov warned through an interpreter that the Russians "left some very capable young players in Moscow who will play for us there . . . and we will be stronger."

Add to this the return from a leg injury of veteran Anatoly Firsov and defenceman Valery Davidov, and the challenge facing Team Canada and Sinden later this month in Moscow appears overwhelming.

Bobrov explained that he went with the younger players "because they were better physically" and it paid off with "more desire to win than in the first two games."

Canadian defenceman Bill White said the ice in Winnipeg arena started "chipping after five minutes, but it was the same for both clubs."

He suggested a lack of conditioning probably accounted for the Soviets taking away play late in the game but "by the end of the month we should be in shape."

Asked if the Soviet skaters really were as fast as they seemed, the Chicago Black Hawk blueliner agreed "they might seem faster (than the NHL players) because of conditioning."

"But you can bet these guys know what they are doing."

Sinden said the same thing earlier, admitting he had picked up some tips that he would use if he were back coaching full time.

"I picked up some ideas I'd like to try," Sinden said. "They do some things we don't do and I'll tell you I can't see anything wrong with a lot of things they do."

Sinden, rapped by Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, for his lineup in game one in Montreal that resulted in a surprising 7-3 Soviet victory, made reference to the matter during the interview.

"If anybody thinks we're not playing like heck out there to win, they're crazy."

Asked who was criticizing him, besides Campbell, Sinden remarked: "You don't get to see some of the telegrams that I have to read."

Wild Earns Cycle Honors

Bill Wild of Port Moody won the "A" class competition when the Victoria Wheelers' two-day bicycle race ended on the weekend.

Wild's overall time for the criterium and time-trial stages of the road races was two hours, 50 minutes and 26 seconds. Mike McPhalen of Vancouver was second and Karl Fawthorpe of Victoria third.

Ties That Bind

A VERY SELECT few of us are permitted a small, I-told-you-so at this juncture.

Four years ago this space trumpeted the following:

"Regardless of all our pride in the ability of the National Hockey League, certain NHL teams would be beaten by the Russians right now on conditioning alone. I concede the point the Montreal Canadiens (ed. note—they were the power at that time) would probably beat the Russians more times than they would lose, but they WOULD lose some. Five years ago this statement would have been heresy and indeed, unthinkable."

Regardless of the outcome of the rest of the games in Canada, I think the Russians have proved a point. I also think the Russian passing style of play is far more crowd-pleasing than the dump-it-in-the-corner Canada method. And oh yes, the games in Russia, on the big ice surface, in front of the partisan Russian spectators, could well be another cup of borscht.

Migawd, don't ever teach them to play golf!

THE TIES that bind are not the exclusive property of such corporate sport giants as the National Hockey League. Their option or reserve clauses are subject to vituperative abuse from many quarters and sooner or later changes will be made to placate government bodies re anti-trust investigations.

The malaise, however, is not just the syndrome of the professional leagues. Take a minute to digest part of a recent Vancouver Island Minor Hockey Association directive to eligible junior "B" Rep League players.

"Please be advised that NO minor hockey association (i.e. Victoria, Saanich, etc.), that is affiliated with the VIMHA, will be releasing any player to play for ANY OTHER junior "B" club. Such player, however, may be released to play for a junior "A" club provided that club supplies a WRITTEN agreement to the minor hockey association concerned, that if said player is released from junior "A" to junior "B", he MUST return to his OWN minor hockey association."

Adds credence to the cradle-to-grave theory insofar as a player not being the master of his own fate.

Clauses of this nature are obviously meant to be tested in a court of law, and already one Victoria area father has threatened such legal action if his son is forced to play for a team other than his own choosing. The reply to his court action threat was something along the lines of "go ahead, if we have to go to court, we'll go to court."

I say that's bluff and bluster. I say the first legitimate sign of legal action will send them scurrying for cover. Hockey associations right from the CAHA down, want no part of court appearances that could fracture such ball-and-chain clauses.

I trust the aforementioned father of my acquaintance will not back down — that he will indeed go the law route if a transfer is denied his son.

LEFTOVERS from the upset of one week ago.

If Premier-elect David Barrett does follow through on a pre-election promise NOT to build that 55-storey Bennett shaft in downtown Vancouver, then would Barrett be amenable to the suggestion (which Bennett was not) that the provincial government spend one million bucks to buy out the Sandy Reid property and make it into a park to continue the Inner Harbor beautification that will take place when the Ocean Cement people move off their present site? A lot of money? Right, but if the Bennett building is scrapped, there's a saving of $100,000,000. One-hundredth of that would do the trick in the Inner Harbor. Or, if not from that saving, maybe the new boss could check the multi-million dollar greenbelt fund for such a purpose. The same argument holds good now as held good under Bennett's regime — beautification of the Legislature's own front yard, as it were.

A look-see wouldn't hurt, Premier Barrett.

ANOTHER Barrett promise should bring about the end of the booze and 'backy advertising bans. Barrett, while admitting he voted for the original legislation, now admits the ban has not worked inasmuch as outside magazines and other publications continue to flow into B.C. complete with said advertising. Removal of the ban will return millions of dollars to the economy of this province.

And, David the giant-killer has one more promise to fulfill. A full, unabridged Hansard for our province — something we should have had years ago.

How the Pill Works

YOUR GOOD HEALTH

By DR. G. C. THOSTESON

Dear Dr. Thosteson: One of my friends is thinking of marrying a man 83 years of age. She is a virile, wide-awake person in her late 60s. She is wondering if there will be any sex life with a man that age. I cannot answer her. Is this within your province to answer? — B.G.C.

Some men that age are sexually active; many aren't. Your friend is asking the wrong person when she asks you. Or me. The only authoritative answer would have to come from her gentleman friend.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Exactly how do birth control pills prevent pregnancy? What does the pill do to the body? — P.F.

The pills are a mixture of hormones. As you know, when a woman is pregnant, she stops ovulation, and when she doesn't ovulate she can't get pregnant again.

Well, the pills change the hormone balance so it resembles that which occurs in pregnancy. Thus, nature thinks a pregnancy has occurred and prevents ovulation. Then you can't get pregnant.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have heard that blood is blue while circulating through a persons body, until it is exposed to oxygen outside the body. Does this account for the blue color of veins that are seen just below the skin's surface? — R.C.

That's more or less correct. Blood, as it leaves the heart to be pumped through the body, is bright red, the red cells carrying oxygen.

As the blood makes its circuit, it picks up impurities, among them carbon. The oxygen becomes carbon dioxide, and the blood takes on a dusky cast, although it is not blue.

The blood, returned via the veins to the heart, then is pumped through the lungs. There the blood releases the carbon dioxide and picks up fresh oxygen. The blood becomes bright red again — for another trip through the body.

Japanese Posters Hail Slaughter

KYOTO (UPI) — Posters hailing the Arab guerrilla invasion of the Olympic Village in Munich appeared Wednesday in Kyoto University.

"Hail Arab fighters for attacking Munich," said the posters at the university's main gate. "Israeli authorities should meet the demand for release of all political prisoners."

Armed and Visible

Two West German security guards turn away curious passerby Wednesday in front of Building 31 in Munich's Olympic Village, which quartered members of Israeli Olympic team attacked and later slain by Arab guerrillas. Upshot was that German security forces posted around village now are armed and visible — something they wanted to avoid at all costs. As one angry and armed West German police officer said outside the village Wednesday, "We didn't want to be seen." Another, explaining arms and scores of police at village, said "we were forced into this. Now we have to give more security for the athletes. We all regret this."

World Shocked by Massacre

Arab Leaders Silent

From AP

The non-Arab world was shocked Wednesday by the Munich massacre of Israeli Olympians. The Arab press defended the Palestinian guerrillas, but most Arab leaders were silent.

In Israel, newspapers called for revenge in blood, but most officials carried their grief in silence.

"Now is the time to settle the score, in blood, with the saboteurs and those who sent them," wrote the Israeli paper Maariv.

"We will not follow the terrorist methods and strike from a distance, we will hit them in their home," it said.

In Cairo, both Al Akhbar and the semi-official Al Ahram devoted editorials to what they called Israeli terrorism.

The Egyptian Gazette said it was a crime to kill, but also a crime to steal a country from the Palestinians.

"The world may call these crimes but it must expect to continue, until Palestinian rights are restored ..." said The Gazette. "As long as Israel refuses justice, it cannot expect the Arabs to leave it in peace."

The leftist Beirut newspaper Al Moharrer, which is close to the Palestinian commandos, said: "Public opinion has always been against the Arabs, never taking their side ... into consideration. So public opinion needs a sharp blow to become impartial."

Government radio stations in Iraq and Syria and Arab nationalist papers in Lebanon accused the West Germans of treachery in opening fire on the guerrillas as they tried to leave with their Israeli hostages.

King Hussein of Jordan was the first Arab leader to speak out. He called the attack the works of "sick minds who are not part of humanity."

West German Chancellor Willy Brandt said in a telegram to Israeli Premier Golda Meir:

"The tragic death of so many young people, who sought only peaceful, sporting competition in Munich, fills the German people with grief and deep mourning."

Prime Minister Trudeau of Canada said the attack was an "affront to the decency and wholesomeness which the Olympic Games are meant to respect and cherish."

It was a delicate situation for the Soviet Union, which is normally critical of terrorism but takes a staunch pro-Arab stand in the Middle East.

Tass, the official Soviet news agency, carried a statement from the Russian Olympic delegation "profoundly deploring the tragedy" and announcing the team's "desire to ... promote progress of peace and co-operation, the successful completion of the Olympic ideals, the cause of Olympic Games in Munich."

Rescue Supported

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Foreign Minister Abba Eban said Wednesday that Israel backed the use of force by West German police to free Israeli Olympians who died in the Munich gunbattle.

Eban said Israel had told West German authorities it would not give in to demands for the release of 200 Arab prisoners in exchange for the Israeli hostages.

"We have no argument with the Germans. They didn't kill the victims."

Montreal Frets About Security

MONTREAL (UPI) — Security will be tightened when the Summer Olympics are held here in 1976, but Montreal hopes to avoid "the image of the army," Mayor Jean Drapeau said Wednesday.

Emphasizing his determination the games would be held, Drapeau said the army might be required to provide tightened security and prevent any acts of terrorism, similar to that by Palestinian Arabs in Munich Tuesday.

The mayor said that prior to Munich he had hoped the "image of the army would be absent" from the Montreal games.

"Will this be possible? I would be premature to say more on the subject," he said. Drapeau explained he did not mean the army might not be needed, but that he hoped to avoid "the image of the army in uniform and armed."

Montreal has been the scene of numerous terrorist incidents in recent years, carried out by militant French Canadians demanding that Quebec separate from Canada. Almost two years ago, separatists kidnapped and murdered Labor Minister Pierre Laporte.

Another Canadian official involved with the Olympic Games said a complete rethinking of security arrangements might be necessary.

William Tindale, executive vice-president of the Canadian Olympic Association, said, "The security situation is obviously going to take a lot of thinking about."

He said Montreal at first thought in terms of a "highly informal" form of security, such as existed in Munich before Tuesday.

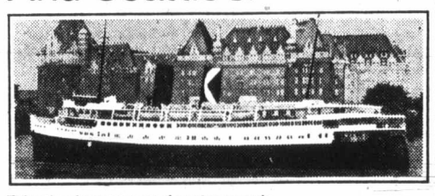

The more relaxed arrangements at Munich followed complaints by many athletes that they were "hounded to death" at past games by soldiers and police, Tindale said.

But he added that he could foresee no easing of international tensions or of the need for tight security at the 1976 Olympics.

Safeguards at Sea

COLLISION in the Strait of Juan de Fuca early Monday morning between ships of Liberian and American registry fortunately resulted in no casualties and little or no oil spillage. It can therefore be considered a fortuitous and timely reminder that safeguards against pollution resulting from an accident to a big tanker in this area are still totally inadequate.

The Liberian, Aegean Sea, inbound for Vancouver to load grain, was deeply holed when the bows of the 12,300-ton C. E. Dant sliced into the number two hold of the smaller vessel. Penetration was beyond the middle-line of the deck and had the Liberian been a tanker the result is readily imaginable.

Since the accident occurred only 30 miles southwest of Victoria an oil spill would have fouled Sooke Inlet, Becher Bay and Bentinck Island inevitably, and probably crept around into Pedder Bay and to William Head. Depending on the tonnage involved it could have spread a deadly slick as far as Esquimalt and the Victoria waterfront, to say nothing of the consequences to the Washington coast.

This mishap occurred in relative calm with visibility estimated by the United States Coast Guard at between half and three-quarters of a mile. That is to say, the navigation lights of a ship would be readily distinguishable at this distance. Admittedly, it is not very much, and if ships are on a collision course even at slow speed gives small margin for delay in decision or escape from an error of judgment.

But one or both of the ships involved presumably kept radar watch and, if the weather was thick enough to warrant it in the opinion of the masters, would have been sounding fog signals. Collision in such circumstances should be a long odds bet.

It happened, nevertheless.

That brings to urgent attention — or should — the state of readiness or effectiveness, of the marine traffic radio monitor system which was to have gone into operation from Vancouver International Airport on July 1. Admittedly there was nothing compulsory about the participation of shipping in this intended navigational aid program. So one lesson should have been learned already.

If the monitor plan is to be of any value its application must be universal. Vessels in Canadian waters should be required to make use of it. If the Americans want to cooperate, then they should agree to its application in their coastal waters.

But until such an agreement is reached, until the additional safeguard of radar warning is incorporated, and until shipping, in and outbound, is required under severe penalty to make the best use of the system, there will continue to be accidents — wrecks on an admittedly dangerous coast as well as collisions in weather too often hazardous.

Representations should be going forward from every agency concerned — and that includes the government of this province — urging the Ottawa authorities to act more quickly. The ugly warning in Monday's collision is clear for all to see.

Behind Closed Doors

THE DOORS are still shut tightly on the continuing inquiry into the reported $10 million damage to the destroyer HMCS Restigouche. Not a word has been heard from an investigation ordered when it was discovered during trials after refit and conversion that the whole propulsion system and newly-installed electrical controls were falling apart. So great was the damage, in fact, that Edgar Benson, then the minister of defence, admitted the ship might be scrapped.

The inquiry, it must be supposed, was called to determine the cause of the corrosion — unofficially blamed on a cleaning compound — and to fix responsibility. There were also the questions of negligence or sabotage to be answered. And the Canadian taxpayers who pay the defence department's annual $2 billion bill are entitled to an explanation.

Direct inquiry by this newspaper in Halifax got a negative response. What had the investigation disclosed? There had been no announcement.

A profound silence met queries in Ottawa.

The prime minister has not seen fit to appoint a minister of defence since Mr. Benson, who held the portfolio briefly after his fiasco in the finance department, has been promoted to the sinecure chairmanship of the Canadian transportation commission.

The answers to the Restigouche riddle should not be all that difficult to find. The court was convened on Aug. 21 in Halifax. That is three weeks ago. Is the Canadian public to believe that no progress has been made? Or is it conceivable that somebody in government hopes the matter will be forgotten if disclosure of findings is long enough delayed?

Mr. Bensons's glib dismissal of this misadventure with the remark about scrapping the ship if the cost of repair promised to be "exorbitant" does nothing to reassure anyone about the defence department's or the government's concern about economy. Certainly Restigouche cost only $26 million to build 14 years ago; and certainly it cost only a paltry $12 million to get her converted and refitted in a Halifax shipyard. So there's no need for anybody to get excited if the ship is a dead loss?

Well, if it should come to a decision about her replacement the cost would be in the neighborhood of $65 million, based on the current $252 million bill for four new destroyer-escorts.

On the record of this blithely blundering administration it would hardly be surprising if that were the ultimate resolution.

A New Interdependence

Regional Supra-National Structures

By LUBOR J. ZINK

MODERN history has been shaped to a large extent by two powerful sentiments: nationalism and social equalization. Both these trends have been motivated by man's quest for freedom and justice.

As a result of this dual striving, large feudal empires were chopped up into national states, colonialism was phased out in the non-totalitarian parts of the world, and organized labor in the democracies gradually gained general acceptance of the economic and social reforms pioneered by its leaders.

In an era when oceans and land distances posed formidable problems to the existing means of communications, the mosaic of fiercely selfish nation-states, though already at odds with the growing economic interdependence spawned by the industrial revolution, was the only practical form of the most advanced political ideas of the day. The mounting discrepancy between the quick advance of science and technology and the slow evolution of social consciousness could still be bridged by improved methods of trade and diplomacy.

Eventually, however, the gap grew too wide for the traditional bridging techniques and the resulting strains and stresses produced explosive frictions which led to global wars and revolutionary convulsions.

By now the clash between socio-political thinking in terms of nation-states and the technologico-economic need for at least regional supra-national entities has reached the point where the traditional forms of nationalism and trade unionism have become major obstacles of progress.

Since the Second World War, it has been increasingly obvious that no one state can cope alone with the problems of the nuclear age. Even leaving aside the military aspect of these problems, no one state, regardless of its size and power, can now hope to manage its own affairs without close co-operation with at least its direct neighbors.

A good example of this new type of interdependence is pollution of the physical environment. Polluted rivers cross international boundaries; so does polluted air. An effective anti-pollution program must therefore be a supra-national endeavor governed by the dictates of geography.

Geography, climate and marketing patterns dictate effective utilization of natural resources and production facilities for the maximum benefit of all the inhabitants of an economically cogent region.

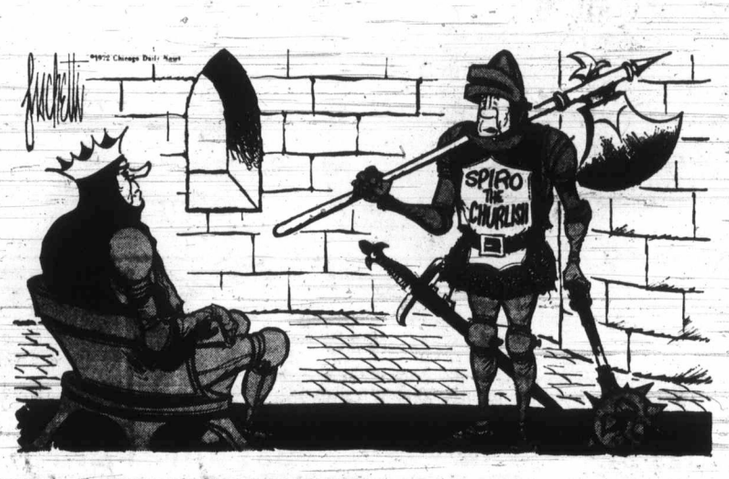

Western Europe, whose close similarity of life-styles is now driven by the momentum of technological advance towards complementary production and marketing programs, is one such obvious economic entity. North America is another. Large parts of Africa, Asia and Latin America are moving through exploratory experiments towards regional supra-national structures.

The impetus for the coalescing trend comes from the growing realization that the nation-state can no longer cope adequately with the impact of the technological revolution on its citizens. Like the city state of the ancient Greek civilization, the nation state is being phased out by pressures of changing economic and social conditions. The regional groupings of states with compatible economic and political structures that are emerging on the international scene are the nuclei of a new organizational pattern dictated by the formative forces of history.

Unlike the futuristic dream of global federalism under a world government, the trend towards supra-national regional integration seeks to accommodate not some abstract concepts or ideological postulates but already existing economic and social imperatives. The traditional notions of nationalism and trade unionism that seek to thwart, or at least delay, the process of regional integration are therefore inherently reactionary and detrimental to smooth evolutionary transition from the no longer viable and conflict-prone national and "class" fragmentation of mankind to at least regional integration.

Unhampered by Europe's long history of nationalistic feuds and miles ahead of any part of the world in experience with free association of diverse peoples under the administrative umbrella of federalism, North America should be the trail-blazer of regional coalescing. Unfortunately, a freak tantrum of archaic nationalism and blackmailing unionism threatens to throw this continent into a convulsion of anachronistic and crippling fragmentation.

"Ah, do I HAVE to stop for a body count?"

The Changing Victoria Scene

Long Road to the White House

By RONALD HARKER

UNLIKE most democracies, the people of the United States know precisely when they are going to get a newly-elected head of state. It is on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in the November of every fourth year.

Most people think that this Nov. 7 he will be Richard Nixon (a sitting tenant of the White House is hard to evict) but until that day all that Americans know for certain about their next president is that he will have been born an American citizen, have lived in the United States for at least 14 years, and be not younger than 35 years.

The rest — the processes and rules by which a man becomes the most powerful politician in the world — is so complicated that nobody has succeeded in describing it adequately in fewer than about 7,500 words.

This is mainly because in election year America really lives up to its name as a federation of 50 semi-sovereign states, each different from all the others, and each obstinately insisting on finding what its people want in its own way.

The business lasts about 11 months, from the so-called state primary elections, which begin in March, and at which the people vote for party candidates, to the formal balloting of a national electoral college in Washington and the inauguration of the new president.

The primaries are rough, early tests of the popularity of candidates for the White House. There were 24 this year. They can be quite unreliable.

In 1952 there were 15 and an earnest, likeable man named Estes Kefauver, who evoked the image of pioneering frontiersmen by wearing a coonskin hat, swept the board in 12 of them, but in the end he did not even get his party's nomination as a candidate. Eight years earlier, one-worlder Wendell Wilkie withdrew his bid for the Republican nomination because just one primary showed that Wisconsin did not want him.

The primaries season lasts until June, and is succeeded by the season of conventions of the two main parties, when each picks its candidate. No third party in 100 years has been able to challenge the dominance of the two-party system in America although nobody can define precisely what is a Democrat and what is a Republican. The American satirist, Mort Sahl, said the only thing that clearly distinguished Old Republicans from New Republicans was that the first said nothing should be altered, while the second said it should, but not now.

The conventions season normally is July to August. Both are chaotic hoaxes. Party delegates from all the 50 states and the District of Columbia, gather to name their champion, but often the real decisions are made in horse-trading almost anywhere in town except in the convention halls.

Even George Washington's rise to be America's first president was partly due to a political bargain. The revolution of 1775 began as a Massachusetts war, but the Massachusetts men knew they could not win unless other states joined in. So they threw their votes behind a Southerner for commander-in-chief, with Washington as a logical choice, for he was a Southerner from Virginia, the largest state. He was also a member of Congress, and the American Congresses — with notable exceptions, as for a national hero like Eisenhower — have always preferred to give power to one of their own, a senator or a governor.

So, in the convention hall, the chairman bangs his gavel for order as part of an act and without hope, because he knows that the thunderous demostrations he is supposed to try to quell, are stage-managed, and will end only with the mini-pantomime script.

It is customary for declared candidates to keep out of sight until the balloting is over. Yet dramatic appearances on the platform have, on odd occasions, violently wrenched the nominating procedure out of course. In 1880, James Garfield got up and made such an impressive speech nominating John Sherman of Ohio that the delegates nominated Garfield himself instead. He was elected president, too.

Nowadays, as a general habit, leading candidates stay out of the circus and watch their fortunes on television in a hotel room.

It was on television four years ago that Americans throughout the land watched, stunned, as police clubbed and tear-gassed anti-war protesters at the Democratic convention in Chicago, with the obvious approval of Mayor Richard Daley, old-style city boss and the party's kingmaker.

And to the dismay of the Republicans in Miami last month there was a repetition of the same kind of violent official reaction to dissent.

Time-honored gamesmanship comes into the balloting process for the nomination of candidates by roll-calls of delegations state by state. This is taken in alphabetical order, Alabama first. But Alabama does not have to respond first. It can pass, as in a round of bidding at bridge, to come in at a more tactical moment. For a delegation may ask to change its state vote before the roll call is ended. A sudden switch of this kind from one candidate to another can create a bandwagon stampede with delegation after delegation scrambling to get on what looks like the winning side — so that if the victor afterwards wins the presidency they may share in his gratitude, and so in the vast patronage that goes with his office.

This year Senator George McGovern was nominated as Democratic candidate on the first ballot and only one vote out of 1,348 was against Richard Nixon.

If the first convention ballot does not produce a majority for one candidate, subtler factors come into play.

An original front-runner must maintain the momentum in his favor, for if his vote fails to rise on a second ballot the impression seizes the convention that he has been stopped, and his supporters then plot to back a better prospect. In 1932 Jim Farley, master tactician for Franklin D. Roosevelt, deliberately held back votes pledged to FDR on the first two ballots so that in subsequent ballots he could call upon them to maintain the momentum. Roosevelt won the Democratic nomination on the fourth ballot. In 1924 there were 103 ballots lasting a fortnight at the Democratic Convention in New York.

The third lap in the race for the White House has now begun, with the two champions campaigning to win the people's vote, and lasting until the election in November.

It is a gruelling phase. The old whistle-stop train journeys with speeches from the rear platform, give way to jet flights followed by a fast motorcade into town centres. Candidates have their own private aircraft and carry along with them political aides, speech-writers, research assistants, public relations experts and journalists. John Kennedy in 1960 travelled 17,000 miles in 10 days — three-quarters of the distance around the earth — and 44,000 miles before polling day. Nixon accomplished a more prodigious feat. He visited every one of the 50 states and on three separate occasions spoke in three different states on one day. His campaign cost the party $12.5 million in advertising alone.

Computers have made their impact on the election and caused some alarm because of the difference in clock time in east and west. They analyze early results from eastern states so fast they can indicate a trend before polling has finished in the far west, and are thus thought capable of influencing the election by generating the same bandwagon hysteria that is artifically created at the conventions.

An American president is the choice of the people, but only indirectly, through an electoral college. Each state controls a number of electoral college votes. The number corresponds to the size of its population, so that sparsely-populated states control only a handful, whereas a state like New York controls more than 40. A candidate who wins the popular vote in any state — if only by a majority of one citizen — receives the backing of that state's complete block of electoral college votes. It is thus possible for a candidate to win most of the people's votes and still lose the presidency in the electoral college. It has happened only twice — in 1876 and 1888.

It is also possible for both candidates to fail to win a majority of the electoral college votes. Then the House of Representatives settles the issue on a basis of one state, one vote. This, too, has happened only twice — in 1801 and 1825.

Unless it happens again the president of the United States will be chosen on Nov. 7, 1972, but he will not begin his four-year tenancy of the White House until noon on Jan. 20 next year.

In Switzerland

An Army Unhorsed

By MAC WILDE from Geneva

SWITZERLAND is to lose its cavalry, all 18 squadrons.

The decision now awaiting parliamentary confirmation was made by the Federal Council only with great hesitation, after eloquent pleas to retain at least some of the cavalry. A petition won 400,000 signatures.

The government case is that manpower is urgently needed for effective combat units. These, it is officially stated, are only just sufficiently manned for defence, under the Swiss universal compulsory military service system, with annual retraining of reservists.

Horses are loved in Switzerland almost as much as in the United Kingdom or Ireland. They are still extensively used for plowing and other agricultural duties on the sloping mountainside fields, and the great brewery at Rheinfelden, near Basle, has a magnificent turnout of ancient drays drawn by four horses each.

In Geneva, the annual riding and jumping competition, the Concours Hippique, is the highlight of the autumn season and attracts competitors from all over the world. It culminates in a great ball at which uniforms are worn. As a tourist attraction, Geneva also still has horse-drawn open carriages, seating four persons, for tours around the city. The horses, well-fed and solid, wear neat lace covers on their heads to ward off almost non-existent flies.

In what can only be described as a lament, a Bern commentator refers to the traditional popularity of the display of the Swiss cavalry, "whose squadrons vivified and lent a quality of inspiration to military parades, in contrast with the almost forbidding and inhuman aspect of modern mechanized troops which convey a gloomy impression of soulless clumsiness."

The Swiss army, he says, "is losing its poetry and charm. In contrast with the splendid uniforms in which the Swiss of the heroic age went on parade, with pompoms on their kepis, with the officers wearing bright colored sashes, and with the mounted brass bands led by standard-bearers from before 1914, the army has now become strictly functional. Such is the price of technical progress."

In fact, the present Swiss army is far from dashing and brilliant in appearance. The soldier's uniform is still a shapeless grey-green and he still often carries an enormous pack on his back, frequently flanked by a spare pair of mountain boots, the weight of which makes him bend forward in a far from military posture.

To its great good fortune, the Swiss soldiery has not been tried in battle for well over a century, so that its fighting qualities must be a matter of conjecture. On the other hand, the Swiss army is a true citizen's army. Each soldier takes his rifle home with him (nowadays an automatic one) together with live ammunition so that, in an emergency, he can take the field with a minimum of delay.

Hope for Man Yet!

By GEORGE GETZE
from Los Angeles

Two species of playful, appealing, roly-poly animals living happily in a laboratory at California State College here are present-day representatives of the most primitive ancestors of man.

According to Annett Ehrlich, associate professor of comparative psychology at Cal State, they show that man's most ancient tendencies are gentleness and co-operative mildness, not the aggressive quarrelsomeness many recent writers on anthropology suggest.

The animals are the slow loris, a big-eyed, furry native of Malaysia that is about as big as a small cat, and the greater galago, a somewhat darker but equally attractive inhabitant of the cool highland forests of Central Africa.

Both are prosimians — a suborder of primates older than the more familiar suborder of anthropoids, which includes moneys and apes (once grouped together as "simians") and man.

The prosimians antedate the others by many millions of years. The loris and galago have existed in their present form, or one much like it, for about 40 millon years, but the "rest of us primates" are a great deal newer in the animal kingdom, according to Dr. Ehrlich.

"It is a misconception still occasionally heard that evolution means man's descent from apes," she said.

"What really happened was that we, the apes and the monkeys all descended from a prosimian ancestor."

"They were the first animals to develop the chief physical characteristics of primates — a brain large in proportion to the rest of the body, big eyes, and perhaps the most important, manipulative hands," Dr. Ehrlich said.

The hands, with their ability to grasp, led eventually to the fashioning of tools. (The extremities of the loris and galago are among the first that can truly be called hands or feet.)

"But the most important characteristic of all — one that is shared by all primates from loris and galago to man himself — is the helplessness of the newborn and the consequent long period of infant dependence on the mother," Dr. Ehrlich said.

"This long and stable relationship ultimately was responsible for the primates becoming social animals. It meant close association with other animals, and the learning of behavior that was acceptable to the others,"

BACKGROUND

Prosimians are no easy animals to study.

They are tree-living creatures of the dusk, not easy to observe behaving naturally as chimpanzees, baboons and rhesus monkeys are.

No one has been successful in observing them in the wold.

In the Cal State lab the light has to be kept very dim. In too much light, galagos and lorises become inactive, but if the light is too dim, Dr. Ehrlich can't see what is going on.

Many investigators have decided that man is aggressive and quarrelsome because primates are that way and so man can never escape his heritage.

Dr. Ehrlich does not object to this kind of drawing of tentative conclusions about man from the behavior of lower primates, but she heatedly objects to the basing of these conclusions on the behavior of only a few species.

"A lot of nonsense has been written and preached recently about the impossibility of changing objectionable features of human life and society," she said.

"It has been argued that these features, such as aggressiveness, are expressions of the biological heritage of all primates, and that it is in our genes to organize only certain kinds of societies.

"Basically, the idea being preached today in popular books is that the inescapable human society is one in which a few dominant individuals get the good things and everybody else defers to their right to them," Dr. Ehrlich said.

"All this is being laid to our primate genes, using as evidence two primate species, the rhesus monkey and the plains baboon."

These two species have been studied more than others because they are easy to study. They happen to be kinds of primate societies that display the least desirable traits.

"When you begin to look at other species, however, you find that these traits and the aggressive kind of societies they lead to are far from universal among primates," Dr. Ehrlich said.

The lorises and the galagos Dr. Ehrlich studies are among the 244 or so species of primates that nobody has taken close scientific looks at before now.

"They are good subjects for this kind of study because they represent a major turning point in the evolution of mammals," she said.

"They are the immediate descendants of arboreal insectivores that 40 million years ago developed the large brains and manipulative hands we possess today.

"You find a totally different kind of social organization among them."

According to Dr. Ehrlich, there are no dominant animals among the lorises and galagos, which means that they share food and the care of infants, and that their sexual organization is casual.

"The most striking thing about the prosimian social organization is that it is relaxed. When you watch rhesus monkeys you see a high level of tension even when they are not actively quarreling, demonstrated by the covert watching of dominant individuals and by general excitability."

Dr. Ehrlich is frank to admit that studying these very early primates has made her somewhat more optimistic about the future of man.

"It makes me hope that the dangerous traits man displays may be changed even though they are shared by monkeys and baboons, that the tendency to set up hierarchal societies may not be irresistible, and that mankind may not after all be doomed to periodic massive bloodlettings," she said.

U.S. Plans New Defence Line Along Islands of West Pacific

By JACK FOISIE from Guam

It now appears certain that some of the West Pacific islands which were bloody battlegrounds in the Second World War will become active U.S. military bases again.

Military planners are convinced that a new defence line must be established in Micronesia, now American-administered islands under UN trusteeship, because of these factors:

- The reversion of Okinawa to Japan means the ultimate loss of the vast supply depots, air bases and marine corps training area located in Okinawa. Warplanes already have been banned, although big jet aerial tankers, which give mid-air refueling to combat craft in the Vietnam war, still are allowed.
- The uncertainty of future U.S. military rights in the Philippines due to political agitation and communist insurgency. A big airbase and navy repair base would have to be closed if present treaties were abrogated.
- Whatever the form of a Vietnam war settlement, there will likely be political turbulence elsewhere in Southeast Asia which would make an American military presence embarrassing even to nations now allies in the Indochina struggle. The United States would like to hold onto its massive Utapao-Sattahip airfield-seaport complex on Thailand's Gulf of Siam, but fallback facilities, located here at Guam, will be further developed.
- If Taiwan some day becomes part of Mainland China, U.S. bases there would be lost.

All these possibilities have caused the Hawaii-based Pacific military headquarters to push for considerable development of facilities on Tinian, Saipan, in the Palaus and possibly the Yap islands. The planners want also to retain the Kwajalein missile range and limited facilities on Bikini and Eniwetok atolls, all in the Marshall Islands.

It is considered certain that Tinian's old B-29 airfield, from where the two nuclear bombs were carried to be dropped on Japanese cities as knock-out punches, will be refurbished and become an American airbase.

Saipan, now headquarters for the trust territory administration, will possibly get an influx of American army troops — perhaps the airborne and special forces units now stationed at Okinawa, according to Guam's lieutenant governor, Kurt Moylan.

In negotiations now under way with representatives of the limited self-governing bodies of the various islands, the United States has specifically requested "options" to acquire troop billeting and training areas on Babelthuap Island in the Palaus (as a marine forward troop base should the marines move from Okinawa), and an airfield nearby. The navy also wants to build a communications site in Koror. And there are persistent reports here that the navy also would like to establish a forward submarine base.

Most of these islands are known to Pacific veterans of The Second World War as rather desolate although sometimes beautiful spots in the vast ocean. Commercial air traffic has made them less isolated, and Peace Corps workers and military "civic action" teams have improved the surroundings.

The people of the Marianas — primarily Saipan and Tinian — are the most politically active, and the majority appear eager to become associated with Guam as an outright American territory.

Saipan is also preparing to be a tourist spot for the Japanese, who have already flooded Guam. Pan-American and Continental Airlines are vying for the Tokyo-Saipan 2,400-mile route.

Conveniently, under the UN trusteeship, the "development" of the islands is restricted to American companies. If they let in another UN-member nation, they'd have to let in all UN-member nation entpreneurs.

The loopholes that a non-UN nation can move into the trust islands without anybody's permission, and Taiwan — now kicked out of the United Nations in favor of the People's Republic of China — is moving into the islands with small commercial ventures in spiteful vengeance. The Japanese also have found their own way in by using local businessmen as fronts.

The other five island groups within the trust territory have just completed six rounds of negotiations with the U.S. government, represented at the talks by Hayden Williams, chairman of the San Francisco-based Asia Foundation.

The use of the islands by the American military, although already granted under terms of the original UN charter of trusteeship, are being elaborated upon and defined in the talks. There is also a draft "compact of free association" being discussed. It would give the islanders more say in the future, but leave the United States in charge of their defence and their foreign policy. Some 2,000 islands are involved, with only 90 of them permanently populated. A 1967 census showed 91,000 people.

There are varying degrees of acceptance to being permanent wards of the United States. The people of Yap, who consider their own Plynesian culture superior to any other, want to be let alone.

Guam, given up by the Spanish at the same time as the Philippines, has been a comfortable and important American naval and air base since the Second World War. There is a slowly rising resentment among the some 50,000 Guamanians over their almost total dependence for a living on the presence of 50,000 Americans. Politicking is a perenial pastime, with the navy administration a frequent target. But no Guamanian seriously advocates demanding that the Yankees go home.

Angry Indians Slap At Uganda 'Racism'

By K. K. DUGGAL from New Delhi

The Indians are furious over President Idi Amin's marching orders to Asians, most of whom are of Indian origin. Popular reaction is that Uganda's action smacks of racial discrimination and flouts the Charter of Human Rights.

It is ironical, the Indians say, that the African blacks who were clamoring against white racism until yesterday are themselves practising racism against the browns of Asian origin. They are apprehensive that the Ugandan happenings will have serious repercussions on Indians in the neighboring East African countries of Zambia, Malawi, Kenya and Tanzania.

The Indians also fear a mass exodus from Africa will ruin their economy and add to the burdens of an already over-populated nation — reeling under unemployment and inflation. The refugee influx from what is now Bangladesh is too fresh in their mind.

Although Amin has backtracked on his earlier decision to expel 23,000 Ugandan Asian citizens, fear persists that a sizeable number of them would be eventually thrown out after screening of their citizenship documents and find their way to India.

New Delhi has told Kampala that India cannot oe treated as a dumping ground, and that it will no accept any Asians holding Ugandan citizenship as they are clearly the responsibility of Uganda. It is concerned only with the Indian passport holders who must be allowed to repatriate their assets.

New Delhi has also rejected the suggestion that India may be used as a camping site for expelled British passport holders.

Official spokesmen in New Delhi point out that the Kenya happenings showed that few Asians in Uganda would give up their British citizenship. Even then they would not entertain any transit passengers.

There is high praise in both official and non-official circles for Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere who raised his voice againt Gen. Amin's arbitrary action and was rebuffed by the dictator.

The Ugandan President's high-handed acion has also cast an ominious shadow over Afro-Asian solidarity. It is pointed out that the talk Afro-Asian brotherhood has been reduced to a mockery by some of the African leaders' highly discriminatory moves against the Asians.

Leading newspapers have condemned Gen Amin's racialism and demanded that the issue be raised at the United Nations.

The Statesman wrote: "Such flagrant disregard for normal codes of behaviour demands the strongest possible censure from the world community. The sooner the matter is raised by the UN the better."

The Hindustan Times said though Amin's reversal of his earlier order to expel Asians holding Ugandan citizenship was "a welcome change nothing in Amin's background gives room for excessive enthusiasm."

It added: "There is need to mobilize world opinion against racialism in reverse of the kind sought to be practised by men like Gen. Amin. The time has come to declare without inhibition that racial prejudice wherever found and directed against whatever pigmentation is barbarous."

The Tribune wrote: "The way Asians are treated in Uganda makes any talk of Afro-Asian solidarity sound grotesque. No African leader, except President Julius Nyerere of Tanzania, has so far said a word against General Amin's actions.

"And this at a time when they are raising a hue and cry against Rhodesia in the Munich Olympics. Black racism may be a backlash against white racisim, but strangely enough its victims happen to be mainly the brown people."

The Motherland commented that the uprooting of Asians was "racialism pure and simple," adding: "President Amin is in no way less guilty than South Africa's practitioners of apartheid. He has started doing against brown Ugandans what the racist whites have been going against black Africans."

Ford Sets Sales Mark

DETROIT (UPI) — Ford Motor Co. broke a 17-year record for automobile sales in August and Chrysler Corp. and American Motors neared long-standing sales marks as the U.S. car industry closed out the 1972-model year, according to figures released Wednesday.

Figures released Wednesday showed General Motors Corp., which usually accounts for more than half the sales, up only slightly from a year ago. GM's 303,692 car sales in the month was not quite half the 669,656 cars sold in August, compared with industry wide sales of 579,547 in August, 1971.

Grain Funds Needed

Are Soviets Selling Gold?

By JOHN BAUSMAN

MOSCOW (AP) — In the last month or so Soviet buyers have gone to the world market to pick up millions of tons of grain, apparently to make up a serious shortage in their own production.

Western specialists here figure the Soviets have run up a bill of around $1.4 billion in grain deals with Canada, the United States, France and Australia.

Unless the Soviets have a special reserve fund that no one knows about, there are two main ways they can raise the money: By reducing planned industrial investment or selling gold, of which the Soviet Union is one of the world's major producers.

Rumors of Soviet gold sales, carried out or planned, have been cropping up in London and Switzerland.

The Soviet Union never publishes an accounting of its foreign currency holdings or gold reserves.

So far as specialists here know, the Soviet Union has made no substantial gold sales since the mid-1960s. In the years 1963 to 1965, also a time of harvest troubles, Soviet gold sales are believed to have run around $500 million a year. In 1966 they tapered off to insignificance.

There is a possibility the Soviets are quietly and regularly selling off small amounts of gold.

In early years the Soviets tended to make big gold deals. For special purposes and major payments they either sold or transferred large amounts of gold.

But that was at a time when gold sold at the fixed rate of $35 U.S. an ounce, no matter how much was put on the market.

With a free price now running nearly double the intergovernmental fixed price of $38 an ounce, the Soviets face a different kind of market.

If they tried to sell large quantities at one time, they could depress the market and lower the value of their gold.

Thus some observers here do not look for any dramatically large Soviet gold sales. They speculate that the Soviets may have started selling off small amounts of gold to avoid big deals that would weaken prices.

This could account for unofficial reports over the last few months that Soviet gold was being sold in Zurich, Switzerland. The U.S. treasury confirmed last month that a relatively small shipment of Soviet gold, 31,327 ounces, had been received from Switzerland by a licensed American buyer.

Just how much gold the Soviets have in reserve is a closely guarded secret. Conservative Western estimates run around 60 million ounces, which would be $2.3 billion at the fixed international price or nearly double that on the free market.

Some Western estimates run substantially higher than that, although the sources are vague about the basis for their figures.

Flexibility Features New Monetary Plan

WASHINGTON (CP) — A more flexible system of international monetary management, including provision for the U.S. to alter the exchange rate on the dollar, has been proposed with reservations by the 20 executive directors of the International Monetary Fund.

Their 25,000-word report, released Wednesday night, will be debated by the 123-member IMF at its annual meeting of finance ministers and central bankers here later this month.

It also forms the starting point for work by a new 20-member committee which will be given the task of working out the details of a new international system to succeed the Bretton Woods agreement of 1944. That agreement, the basis of IMF work since, was severely bent if not shattered last year when the U.S. released the dollar's tie to its old value of 1-35th of an ounce of gold.

The report presents the pros and cons on numerous proposals that have been made for revising the old monetary system, by which nearly all non-Communist countries pegged their exchange rates to the dollar. But it avoids coming down heavily in favor of any particular system, saying the IMF governors want to leave the subject open for debate this fall.

The IMF annual meeting is to open Sept. 25 and run for a week. The new 20-member committee is expected to start its work Sept. 28, and sources said it may take up to two years to complete the job.

Blacktop Path Uncertain

By GEORGE GIBSON
Colonist Business Editor

Northern British Columbia residents may have thought a few months ago that their economic future was on a definite path, for good or bad.

The Social Credit party, especially in northeastern B.C., had been going along quite well on a policy of black-topping highways and opening up the area with railroads.

Then the Liberals came in federally early last July to say, in effect, that, yes, roads and railways were a big item in their northern B.C. plans too.

But last Wednesday things happened. The Peace River, both north and south, returned Social Credit members to Victoria but found Thursday that they were one of the few areas that expressed themselves in like manner at the ballot boxes.

Two days later Prime Minister Trudeau threw down the gauntlet and the federal election battle was in progress.

What will happen now to all that proposed blacktop? They would really like to know up there.

They may get an indication quite soon. Premier-elect Barrett has promised to name a northern development minister to his new cabinet next week. This minister must try to reconcile the NDP policy of progress for the people first with the real need for better roads and railroads north of Prince George.

Federal Transport Minister Don Jamieson detailed a six-point transportation policy for B.C. that was sniffed at by Bennett as being nothing new. Nothing has really happened about it, either, in the interim and now the reigning federal government will devote its energies toward getting re-elected before it can sit down with the NDP and talk it over.

There are two strong candidates for the northern development post in the provincial cabinet. First is Hartley Dent who won Skeena after losing both a byelection and an election there, as well as a federal election.

Dent, 43, is a former Anglican clergymen who turned to school teaching in the last few years.

The other candidate is the man who defeated Lands and Forests Minister Ray Williston in Fort George, Alf Nunweiler, 42.

Nunweiler is a CNR train despatcher and Prince George alderman who topped the poll there in the last two civic elections.

Both Dent and Nunweiler know what the north needs. Whether or not they can deliver is now the big question.

How some present northern entrepeneurs think was shown last spring in an interview with Bob Keen, a 39-year-old construction giant of Fort Nelson here are two paragraphs reprinted from that interview:

"Keen is quite happy with the present Social Credit government. He's satisfied that their move in bringing the PGE to Fort Nelson and a future link with timber products will mean great stability in the northern Peace River.

" 'Any new government at this time would be disastrous' he stated, with conviction. 'Bennett's got the vision for the northeastern part of B.C.' "

Lowly Field Pea Wins Recognition in Agriculture

OTTAWA (CP) — Scientists are making a place in Canadian agriculture for the lowly field pea, potential Cinderella crop of the 1970s, which could diversify the wheat-based economy as rapeseed did in the 1960s.

In recent reports, the National Research Council mentions field peas enthusiastically as an inexpensive nutritious food that will "help to bring an end to the protein gap which exists in developing countries and is being developing in the 'have' countries."

The council journal, Science Dimension, says field peas, reduced recently to about a one-million-bushel-a-year crop grown in Manitoba from a 13-million bushel crop in Ontario before the beginning of the century, have a number of advantages as a supplementary protein crop.

"They are adaptable to climatic conditions on the Canadian Prairies and can be handled by existing farm machinery. They can be stored and shipped like grains, and because of their low fat level of about 1 per cent, rancidity or heating problems should be no more pronounced than in cereals."

As well, the report says, peas contain no known toxic materials and should need no processing other than grinding for use in feeds.

"The characteristic flavor is not unpalatable to animals and on cooking becomes quite acceptable in certain foods, for example, pea soup."

Research is centered around 2,000 plots of peas grown at the University of Saskatchewan in Saskatoon last summer. Scientists with the Prairie regional laboratory of the NRC now are analysing the peas for protein content.

Bread made from wheat flour, pea protein concentrate and wheat glutten meets the federal food and drug directorate definition of "an excellent source of dietary protein."

The scientists also are testing peas in such foods as potato chips and mock duck. Others are developing a "milk shake" in which the protein is supplied by peas.

Although there is considerable work yet to be done, the research council says work has reached the point where "preliminary feasibility studies" on processing and selling pea flour, protein concentrate and starch, can be done.

Senior Standbys To Fly Cheaper

VANCOUVER (CP) — CP Air announced Wednesday that senior citizens will be offered a 40-per-cent discount on standby fares across Canada, effective Oct. 1.

The airline earlier announced a 40-per-cent standby discount for youth and a 20-per-cent discount with confirmed space and a one-third discount standby for senior citizens.

The latest proposal, subject to government approval, brings the standby discount for persons 65 years of age and over in line with the 40-per-cent discount for young travellers.

Smith Wasn't There

VANCOUVER (CP) — In a Vancouver story dated Sept. 4, The Canadian Press erroneously attributed to H. A. Smith, president of Sooke Forest Products Ltd., the comment that Chinese visitors to the recent Canadian trade fair in Peking had stolen industrial secrets.

Several Canadian businessmen who attended the fair made comments to the effect that the Chinese were more interested in learning how a product was manufactured so they could make it themselves, rather than buying it from a foreign company.

However, Smith was not a member of the Canadian delegation to Peking and made no such comment.

The Canadian Press regrets its error and apologizes for any embarrassment or inconvenience caused Smith or his company.

Crops Show Drop

OTTAWA (CP) — Statistics Canada painted a bleak picture of the 1972 grain and oilseed crop Wednesday, predicting a drop in nearly all principal field crops in its first estimate of production Wheat production, estimated at 507.5 million bushels, is 4 per cent lower than last year's 529.6 million bushels.

The statistics bureau, basing its yield estimates from reports from correspondents at Aug. 15, said barley production slipped 17 per cent to 497.7 million bushels from 601.6 million last year. The oat yield is expected to drop to 292.8 million bushels from 363.5 million in 1971, 19 per cent.

Hot dry weather on the Prairies during the last two weeks has hurried crops somewhat but most remain about two weeks behind normal.

Lake Louise Development

'Canadians First' Urged

BANFF (CP) — The federal government has been asked that Canadian investors be encouraged first in any future development schemes for Lake Louise, Alta.

Louis Biro, spokesman for the townsite, said here Tuesday that the Lake Louise Business Association, Lake Louise Community Association and the school board agreed to the position at a recent joint meeting.

A letter was sent to Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien asking to meet and discuss the proposal.

"We feel that lower Lake Louise should be developed by Canadians first because it is in a national park for Canadian people," Biro said.

He added that the groups represent "generally 100 per cent" of the year-round residents at Lake Louise.

Residents want some development in lower Lake Louise to overcome summer-season crowding but "not on the basis of the second Las Vegas" that Village Lake Louise promised to be.

Biro said residents are not against foreign development at Lake Louise but there must be government controls and only allowed when Canadian investment has decided not to participate.

In July, the government rejected the $30 million Village Lake Louise development proposal for the townsite in Banff National Park. It was to be developed by Village Lake Louise Ltd., which is jointly owned by Imperial Oil Ltd. and Lake Louise Lifts Ltd. Imperial is 69.8 per cent owned by Standard Oil of New Jersey.

KING FISHERMAN

Southern Off-Shore Waters Catch Heavy

Fishing was terrific this weekend in the Becher Bay, Beechey Head to Otter Point area.

T. Carveth, 924 Dunford picked up a 46.8-pounder in Becher Bay and there were several landed in the 30-pound class from Beechey Head.

On Tuesday when it was too windy to fish at Beechey Head, one boat returned with a 26-pounder, a 17-pounder and a 10-pound coho the fisherman had caught right in Becher Bay.

Many limit catches have been reported from the Saanich Inlet, with the heaviest a 24-pounder and the majority around ten pounders. The fish are being taken at all depths with strip and Minnow Teasers the popular lures. The circle from Goldstream Island, to the Narrows is the most productive.

Swimming Pool Fences Discussed in Oak Bay

The day is approaching when Oak Bay swimming pool owners may be asked to fence the entire backyard rather than just the pool area, Ald. Brian Smith told Oak Bay council Monday night.

Present regulations call for a three-foot fence around pools, and council has been asked by some residents to increase the fence size.

"We would end up with nothing but eyesores," said Smith.

The idea of the present requirements, he said, was to prevent a small toddler from falling in, not to stop an older child from climbing in.

"Maybe we have got to the stage where fencing of backyard swimming pools should be concerned with fencing the whole backyard," he said.

Smith made his remarks as council gave first three readings to an amendment to the Uplands regulations, which would bring fencing requirements for pools in that area in line with the rest of the municipality.

(The Uplands area of Oak Bay has its own zoning regulations.)

Sept. 18 was set for public hearing.

Seventeen letters asking council to continue the work of Project Recycle were received and filed, after council heard that a committee of the Capital Regional Board will receive a brief from the recycling group today.

Council is also considering a pilot collection scheme to give an idea of costs and acceptability.

Ald. Doug Watts said such a pilot scheme would cover about 500 houses.

Council decided to table a request for an increase in its contribution to Centennial Stadium until Victoria council has reached a decision.

The university has asked for an increase from the municipalities of 5 per cent per year, from $12,160 in 1972 to $14,751 in 1976, while estimating that its own share would increase from $18,240 to $22,127 during the same period.

Ald. John Goult suggested that since schools are the principal users of the stadium apart from the university, the school board should be asked to pay part of the cost.

Council also went on record as promising a sympathetic hearing to damage claims from Bowker Creek residents upstream from the culvert, if they should suffer flood damage before a $100,000 concrete culvert can be completed.

Court Slaps Hand of Justice

LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — Judge James Edgar, who let the hand of justice wander too freely, got his wrist slapped by the Michigan Supreme Court Wednesday for fondling female court employee's.

Edgar and Magistrate James Lee Blodgett were publicly censured after they were found to have "slapped, patted or touched" female court employees repeatedly in "a familiar or suggestive manner" in the Ingham County district court.

The state high court told Edgar he had "brought dishonor and public disgrace to the office which you hold."

Edgar was fined $1,500 by the supreme court and Blodgett was fine $1,000.

The charges against the two men had been made by the judicial tenure commission and upheld by the supreme court.

Edgar had been charged with once forcing a female employee into a counter, where he wrote his name upon her undergarment." The commission also said he seized another woman, put her on a counter and beat her head on the counter "until she wept."

Blodgett was accused of grabbing a female employee and putting her on a counter to expose her underwear.

Chief Justice Thomas Kavanaugh told Edgar his behavior constituted "judicial misconduct in office," though it did not show that other court functions were thereby impaired.

"But the record clearly shows your folly — that while occupying the office of district judge, you displayed the most crass behavior — so tawdry, in fact, that you have brought dishonor and public disgrace to the office which you hold."

Both men, accompanied by their wives and attorneys, apologized to the court and to their families for the "embarrassment" the case had caused those involved.

Tragic Montreal Blaze

White Plymouth Sought

MONTREAL (CP) — Police investigating the Friday night fire which killed 37 persons in the Blue Bird Club have asked police across the country to watch for a white 1965 Plymouth sedan bearing Quebec licence number 195-359.

The car is registered to Marc Boutin, 24, who, along with James O'Brien, 22, is being sought on a coroner's warrant in connection with the fire.

Giles Eccles, 24, is being held in Montreal pending a coroner's inquest Sept. 13.

Police say three regular patrons of the club were ordered off the premises Friday night after an argument with the doorman.

Shortly after they drove away from the club, three Montreal men purchased gasoline at a downtown service station, police say. Witnesses told police they later saw three men dump liquid in the stairway leading to the second floor.

Opinions Split On Research At Universities

FREDERICTON (CP) — A suggestion that the federal government take over responsibility for all research conducted at Canadian universities ran into opposition Wednesday during the opening sessions of the 24th annual Conference of the Canadian Institute of Public Administration.

Douglas Wright, Ontario's deputy provincial secretary for social development, made the suggestion during a panel discussion on national policies for the financing of higher education.

The federal government could have achieved "a profound influence" on the direction of academic endeavors in Canada during the last 20 years had it financed university research more heavily.

The cost of research conducted at Canadian universities would amount to "anything from a quarter to a half of the present operating cost of our universities."

Maurice L'Abbe, vice-rector of the University of Montreal, said Quebec does not want Ottawa to take control of all university research.

Such a move would tend to fragment the university system in Canada by separating research programs from the general program of instruction.

A. B. Safarian, dean of graduate studies at the University of Toronto, said universities had a broader view of over-all educational goals and should retain control of their programs.

He suggested the federal government work instead toward additional centres of academic excellence, elimination of duplicate university programs and better communication between universities.

Dr. Colin Mackay, executive director of the Association of Universities and Colleges in Canada, and a former president of the University of New Brunswick, said he hopes Ottawa and the provinces will adopt "a centre of the road approach."

Safarian was also critical of Wright's suggestion that universities acted, in some cases, as "academic playpens" for the country's elite. He said research continued in Ontario indicated a broad base of the population could take advantage of a university education.

Tray of Rings Taken, $6,000

VANCOUVER (CP) — Diamond rings worth about $6,000 were stolen from a showcase in the Hudson's Bay downtown store. Police said the thief took a tray of rings and escaped unnoticed in the crowded store.

Democrats

Bugging Proof Hunt Goes On

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Attorneys for the Democratic national committee, building their court case to prove an alleged bugging attempt at party headquarters, Wednesday prepared a further list of White House and Republican party officials who might shed more light on the incident through sworn statements.

Alan Galbraith, an associate of attorney Edward Bennett Williams, said, "I don't know when we'll have the list ready. We're working on it now, but the defendants' lawyer wants to talk to some of the same people we do, so scheduling is a problem."

Lawyer on Williams' staff have requested 13 depositions, mostly from present and former White House and GOP officials.

John Mitchell, the former director of President Nixon's re-election campaign, completed his deposition before Williams' staff Tuesday, repeating denials that he had any knowledge of the incident.

The Democrats are suing five burglary suspects in a $1 million invasion of privacy suit arising from their capture last June 17 in the Democrats' offices at the plush Watergate apartment complex. Police said the suspects had electronic surveillance equipment and cameras in their possession.

In another aspect of the case, Democratic national chairman Jean Westwood told a news conference in Salt Lake City, Utah, Tuesday that a member of her press staff last week found two workmen installing a "red box" in a large hole cut in a wall next to the party offices.

The box, described as about the size of a matchbox with wires hanging from it, was turned over to Williams for further study.

"We have the box and we are trying to figure out what, if anything, it has to do with this case," Galbraith said. Williams confirmed this but would say nothing further.

The Watergate Five's attorney, New Yorker Henry Rothblatt, Tuesday asked former Democratic national chairman Lawrence O'Brien to appear for his deposition Sept. 21. He asked to hear Mrs. Patricia Roberts Harris, credentials committee chairman for the Democrats, Sept. 11, and Mary Lou Berg, who recently resigned as party vice-chairman, Sept. 15.

Federal rules of civil procedure permit either side in a lawsuit to obtain court subpoenas to get sworn factual depositions from persons it believes to have knowledge of the events or issues at stake.

Sentencing Delayed

TORONTO (CP) — Harold Ballard, president of Maple Leaf Gardens, has gained a delay in his sentencing on charges of fraud and theft from the sports arena.

Ballard, convicted Aug. 15 on charges involving almost $205,000, was to have been sentenced next Thursday. Judge Harry Deyman has changed the date to Oct. 20 at the request of defence counsel Mr. J. J. Robinette.

Air Charters:

Scrupulous Firms' Image Suffers

From Bucket Shop Operators' Antics

By RAY DYKES
Colonist Reporter

The air charter business in Canada has been hijacked by a miserable public image and Victoria area charter consultants feel they have been unjustly linked to it.

And what the charter industry is struggling against is the barrage of abuse from the 2,500 Canadians currently stranded in Europe because of the failure of charter flights.

The cause is a string of what the trade terms "bucket shop" charter operations by unscrupulous men out to swindle and run.

So far 12 charter flight information firms have folded in Toronto alone this year. Toronto police are looking for six of the 12 owners who appear to have skipped with the loot.

The bucket shops are conveniently outside federal jurisdiction and there are no provincial regulations preventing them from operating as they please.

Their ploy is to offer travellers low-cost, one-way tickets to Europe with vouchers which are to be redeemed for return tickets at an agency at some European point.

Unfortunately all too often the agency does not exist and travellers are forced to try to jam themselves into regularly scheduled flights — a bonus for major international airlines.

But company failures and bucket shops have yet to make their mark in western Canada.

Some charter flight referral agents suspect other operators of running these shops and will tell you so openly.

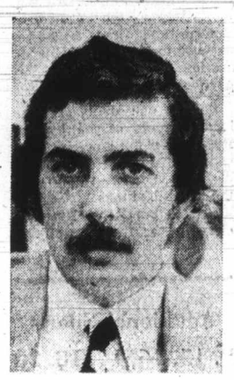

In Victoria, only one charter agency has closed in recent months and that was Piccadilly Travel. As far as can be determined, the firm shut down simply because it couldn't make enough money.

Victoria city police's fraud squad has had no complaints about the closed charter agency and others operating now in the city.

This fact, coupled with the knowledge that the Victoria Better Business Bureau has never had a complaint about any of the city's charter firms, is why local firms feel they don't deserve the bad image lumped on the industry in general.

However, Victorians have been among the thousands of Canadians stranded in Europe this summer.

Local charter people say the trouble begins when passengers "trying to save a few bucks" deal with other than Canadian licensed air charter companies. Flights from Seattle are usually outside the protective curtain of Canadian regulations.

Wheaton
. . . clean, open shop

The principals of three of Victoria's major charter flight firms — Peter Wheaton of Charter Flight Consultants, Tom Woodward of Four Seasons Travel and Joan Hughes, secretary of Charter Flight Discount Club — say that none of their passengers has been stranded.

If flights don't fill as expected, alternatives are arranged or ticket money refunded.

And if you are particularly nervous about the money you have invested in a ticket he'll give guarantees in writing that you won't lose any of it.

But he warns that, because of the nature of the business, normal flight timetables and guarantees are hard to give.

"I'd be foolish and underhanded if I assured a client everything was going to happen exactly as planned," he said. There are certain problems a charter flight consultant can't ignore and chief among these is that the aircraft has to be full or it won't make the trip.

Wheaton also points out that charter agents have to be careful whom they let their clients fly with. He sticks to Canadian licensed carriers because he says "if there's any possibility of shady deals going on, I won't touch that flight with a barge pole."

Despite the difficulty in giving guarantees, Wheaton said 95 per cent of his clients get what they want and the others are offered alternate flights.

Stuck to Tom Woodward's office wall at Four Seasons Travel, a string of postcards bear testimony to happy flights made by his clients.

Woodward, who also runs a branch office in Duncan as well as full travel services, said there were no Victorian passengers stranded anywhere with Canadian air charter companies.

He will quote figures saying 52 per cent of Canadians flying the transatlantic route do so on charter flights.

Air charter firms get the ticket money 60 days before the flight, according to Canadian Transport Commission regulations, and have to put it in a trust account. They draw 50 per cent when the flight reaches Europe and the rest when the passengers are safely back in Canada.

But the cash is gathered well before 60 days in some cases by club secretaries organizing the trip and charter flight agents and is not protected until it reaches the airline trust accounts.

Currently in B.C. some of the major charter flight agents are trying to form their own policing body through provincial legislation and a group they hope to call the B.C. Charter and Group Travel Organization.

Wheaton said the aims of the body would be:

- Compulsory bonding of all charter flight agents to give passengers protection against company collapses;
- A code of ethics for the charter agents;
- Provincial legislation to close up loopholes which allow anybody to start up a charter flight agency without financial backing.

The charter flights agents involved number about 12 of the almost 100 in the province but Wheaton said he hoped the idea would catch on and show the public that the industry was genuinely interested in policing itself.

New Rules

Recent new Canadian Transport Commission regulations are aimed at making it tough for "bucket shop" charter organizations.

In future charters:

- The carrier must prove it has been paid for both the outgoing and return portion of the trip;
- It must investigate every passenger to make sure he is a member in good standing of the charter organization;
- It must undertake to fly back only those passengers it started out with; and
- The airline is required to make up a passenger manifest showing all passengers along with their home address, their passport numbers and nationality and deliver it immediately after the flight returns.

Collision Under Investigation

Ships' Iron Embrace Shorn

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

Two freighters that had remained locked in rigid embrace for 67 hours following a collision at sea were separated at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday without apparent mishap.

It took repeated efforts of men, tugboats and various equipment, along with a number of failures before the American-owned C. E. Dant and the Liberian freighter Aegean Sea were pulled apart in Parry Bay, a mile off Weir's Beach.

The Aegean Sea, with a gaping hole where the other ship had been wedged in its side, was taken under tow to Esquimalt Graving Dock. The C. E. Dant sailed to Ogden Point under its own steam and tied up for the night.

Earlier it had been indicated that the 12,300-ton American vessel, owned by States Steamships of San Francisco, would proceed to Seattle.

This ship and the 9,000-ton Aegean Sea collided on calm but fog-covered seas about 20 miles out of Victoria in Juan de Fuca Strait at 1:30 a.m. Monday. The collision, which occurred in Canadian waters, is the subject of a preliminary investigation by the federal transport department.

Fortunately the bow had struck No. 2 hold which was empty of fuel. However, the job of separating the ships was hazardous because of the fact that the adjoining No. 3 hold contained fuel.

Tugboats were unable to separate the vessels at sea. They were towed into Parry Bay Tuesday. Plans to use work crews with cutting torches had to be called off Tuesday night because of 35-knot winds.

During the night the ballast was shifted in the C. E. Dant in hope that the bow would rise sufficiently to allow it to be pulled free from the other ship.

By daybreak Wednesday they were still wedged together and eight boilermakers went to work with their cutting torches. At 4 p.m. two tugboats of Seaspan International Ltd., Sudbury II and the Seaspan King, failed in an attempt to pull them apart.

During the day precautions were taken in case of an oil spill. A fisheries patrol vessel and Coast Guard cutter were on the scene.

The collision has renewed the call for action from those who say shipping is posing a threat to the B.C. coastal environment. Victoria MP David Groos wants Canada and the U.S. to work out an agreement that would dictate stringent controls for shipping in Juan de Fuca Strait.

B.C. Liberal Leader David Anderson will refer to the latest accident in his U.S. court fight to block an oil tanker route from Alaska to Washington.

Search for 'Bible Freak' Murder on Investigators

RCMP officers investigating the Radar Beach double murder have had 76 frustrating days searching for a "Bible freak" who could be dead somewhere in the bush.

Creally said Wednesday no trace had been found of the man charged with the double shooting tragedy American-born Joseph Henry Burgess, 25, alias "Job Week," a known "Bible freak."

RCMP "wanted" bulletins have stretched across North America trying to locate Burgess, whose home town is Jersey City, N.J.

He is wanted on a charge of non-capital murder in the deaths of Anne Barbara Durrant, 22, of Vancouver and Lief B. Carlsson, 22, of Sweden, whose bullet-riddled bodies were found June 22 in a lean-to shelter on Radar Beach, about five miles south of Tofino in Vancouver Island's rugged west coast.

Creally said that the suspect could have committed suicide and might be "lying somewhere in the bush."

Eight RCMP officers staged surprise raids on hippie settlements in the Bamfield area last week in an effort to flush out Burgess, who they thought could still be in the remote area.

The raids were made in the Ki Bay area and during the day mounties talked with about 40 transients camped in an assortment of shacks and lean-tos for the summer.

The result was a blank and Creally admits he finds the lack of information about Burgess whereabouts or movements "surprising."

One theory competing with the feeling that he is dead is that he could be sheltering somewhere along the West Coast Lifesaving Trail which stretches from Port Renfrew to Bamfield.

Checks with hikers using the trail have produced no clues.

Another theory has Burgess in Europe or "somewhere else abroad."

Creally said that even though the suspect had a few days start on police something would usually have been heard by now.

"I haven't quite experienced this in my career at all. We gave it as good or better coverage in North America as in any case I've been associated with.

"It's unusual not to come up with something," he said.

And he added that if Burgess wasn't dead he'd obviously gone to "great trouble to disguise himself to avoid detention."

RCMP investigation is continuing with checks on former friends of Burgess, places where he has worked and soft drug users, as the suspect was known to have used marijuana and hashish.

Region Board Debates Recycle Depot Aid

Efforts intensified Wednesday to keep one of Western Canada's most successful recycling operations from closing down later this month.

The Capital Regional Board's committee of the whole ordered a report prepared on the feasibility of the board's taking over the Saanich-based Project Recycle.

The board's engineers will compile the report and have it completed within two weeks.

At the same committee meeting regional board officials heard a letter written Aug. 25 by then opposition leader Dave Barrett, expressing concern over the anticipated closure of Project Recycle.

Barrett's letter said that the operation should receive provincial support, but that "no such help can be expected from the Social Credit government."

Regional board officials also indicated that interim grants may be authorized to keep the project going.

They told the meeting that the project would have to be phased out by Sept. 15 because there wasn't adequate funding to continue.

Ted Knowles, one of the originators of the project, said the operation had been so successful that volunteer help was no longer able to cope with it.

The recycling service, he said, would have to be operated on a municipal or regional basis.

The project began about two years ago with the help of a federal Opportunities for Youth grant.

A number of Greater Victoria councils have already gone on record in favor of continuing the program. Saanich is considering a $5,000 grant to prevent scrapping of the project.

During the past 20 months, Project Recycle has collected and re-sold hundreds of tons of glass, newspapers, cardboard, tin cans, aluminum and household fats.

According to estimates, about 5 per cent of Greater Victoria's population is actively involved in the recycling program.

Project co-ordinators say that a massive program of information and education would soon convert most of the population to the recycling idea, which involves separation of wastes in the homes.

The project operates out of a central depot, an old warehouse at Borden and McKenzie which it leases from the municipality of Saanich for a nominal fee.

Headline Incorrect

Due to an error in a headline in Wednesday's Colonist, it was incorrectly reported that bundled newspapers would be accepted Sunday at Project Recycle, 4026 Borden.

The depot will not be open Sunday but newspapers will be accepted from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday.

Ambulance Crews Apply for Certification

By BROCK KETCHAM
Colonist Reporter

Employees of an ambulance firm that provides emergency ambulance service to the city of Victoria have submitted an application for certification as union members, it was learned Wednesday.

At the same time, Garden City Ambulance Ltd. vice-president Neil Leard confirmed that he submitted a verbal resignation from the company about a week ago.

Seven men — including Leard, company president J. R. Knezacky and five employees — man two ambulances required under the three-year contract with Victoria which expires June 30, 1973. The company also has a third ambulance.

Douglas Beckett, who is Canadian Union of Public Employees business agent for Vancouver-based Local 873, Ambulance Employees Union, said the Garden City employees submitted an application for certification as Local 873 members last Thursday.

Beckett said the B.C. Labor Relations Board is currently investigating the application, and certification for the employees is expected within two weeks.

Asked why the employees want to become union members, Beckett said, "They're generally dissatisfied with conditions there."

Leard, who works as an ambulance attendant as well as being an official of Garden City Ambulance, declined comment on why he resigned.

The vice-president said date of termination of his employment with the company will not be decided until someone can be found to replace him.

Leard said he will be leaving his active positions as vice-president and ambulance attendant but will retain his position as a company director until he can sell his shares. The company has three shareholders.

"I'm leaving with the idea of getting out completely," Leard said. He said he has not decided what he will do after he leaves the company.

Beckett said he has talked with Garden City Ambulance officials two or three times during the past month and outlined to officials CUPE's position that Victoria-area ambulance service should be regionalized and operated on a non-profit basis.

Victoria CUPE representative Tom Smith said that after an application for certification is submitted, the government posts a notice on the employer's premises.

Smith said the employer is then given 10 days to submit a reply to the notice if he wishes.

If there is no reply, the investigating officer submits a report to the Labor Relations Board to be considered at its next meeting.

Smith said it is not normal for an application to be contested because the employer would have to prove that the number of employees applying are inappropriate for collective bargaining.

When asked about the latest developments within his company, Knezacky declined comment.

Russians Rally for 4-4 Tie As Puck Series Moves West

WINNIPEG (CP) — Two goals late in the second period earned Russia a 4-4 tie Wednesgame of their eight-game day night in the third exhibition hockey series with Canada.

Alexander Bodunov got what proved to be the tying goal at 18:28 of the second period, slapping home a rebound less than four minutes after Yuri Lebedev had pulled the Russians to within one goal by deflecting the puck past a screened Tony Esposito.

Vladimir Petrov, in the first period, and Valery Kharlamov, in the second, got the other Russian goals. Jean Paul Parise, Jean Ratelle, Phil Esposito and Paul Henderson scored for Team Canada.

The Canadians were again hurt by loose defensive play in their own end and only the alert play of Tony Esposito in the final period allowed them to escape with a tie.

CONDITIONING SHOWS

The conditioning of the Russian club began showing late in the second period and continued throughout the final 20 minutes. The Canadians had been able to contain them through most of the first half of the game with good checking and hard hitting.

But the Russian skaters began slipping past the body-checks to set up their attack.

With the Canadians holding control of the play, an errant Frank Mahovlich pass gave the visitors new life just two minutes later. Petrov took the puck inside the Canadian blueline and fired a 30-foot slapshot through Tony Esposito's legs.

SLOPPY DEFENCES

It was one of two short-handed goals scored by the Russians in the game as they continued to take advantage of sloppy Canadian play with the man advantage.

Petrov kept the Russians close in the first period and Kharlamov side-stepped a desperation lunge by Brad Park to beat Esposito after the Canadians had moved ahead, 3-1, in the second.

Phil Esposito's goal gave Canada that 3-1 lead and seemed to take some of the steam out of the Russians as their fore-checkers dropped back, allowing the Canadians to get organized and come out of their own end.

GOALKEEPER STARS

The Canadians took the opportunity and fired 17 shots at Vladislav Tretyak, but the young goaltender again proved his value, kicking out all but two shots and making some outstanding saves.

The Russians had only eight shots on goal in the middle period, but their crisp passing and well-disciplined positional play paid off with the two late goals when Team Canada tired.

The Canadians were a tired club in the third period, managing only six shots on goal as the Russians demonstrated the style of play that earned them the world amateur championship.

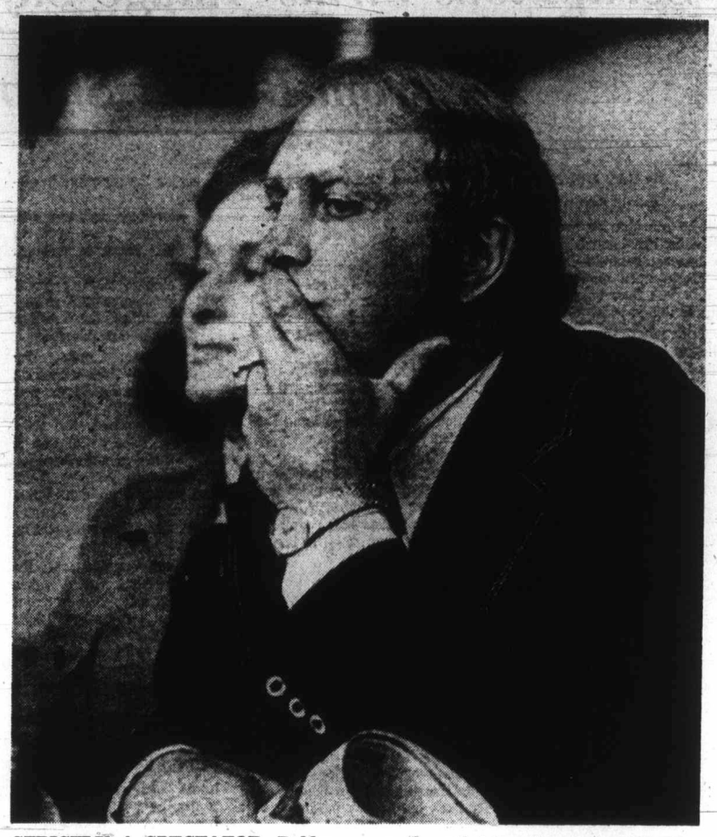

Henderson had Canada's best chance in the final period, but Tretyak, who showed the Canadians an excellent glove hand on numerous occasions, picked off his quick shot from about five feet out.

CLOSE CALLS

Tony Esposito was only a little busier, making eight saves, but the Russians twice had him beaten and were unable to put the puck in the net. Park cleared one puck that was past Esposito and headed for the goal line, and Kharlamov just missed putting the Russians ahead with seven minutes remaining when he rolled the puck across the goal mouth behind Esposito.

Canada outshot the Russians, 38-25, and took five of the nine penalties, including a 10-minute misconduct to Wayne Cashman.

The fourth game of the series will be played Friday in Vancouver.

Tigers, Red Sox Triumphant In Duel of Eastern Division

Detroit Tigers and Boston Red Sox drew the blood Wednesday when the four leaders in the American League East clashed.

Continuing to get sensational relief pitching, the Tigers knocked off the defending-champion Baltimore Orioles, 4-3, while the streaking Red Sox took New York Yankees, 2-0.

Tigers got three runs in the first inning ad one run in the third inning and Chuck Seelbach made it enough to give Mickey Lolich his 20th win.

Seelbach came to the rescue after four sixth-inning singles had produced two Baltimore runs and retired pinch-hitter Terry Crowley to leave two runners stranded. Then he shut out the Orioles the rest of the way to make it 35 consecutive scoreless innings for Detroit relief pitchers.

Gates Brown drove in the Tigers' second run and scored the other two. The first was driven in by Mickey Stanley's triple.

New York Yankees kept threatening without scoring, then were suddenly done in by two fifth-inning runs. They came about when Carl Yastrzemski, who had singled in his first two at bats, connected for a triple and Reggie Smith hit Mel Stottlemyre's next pitch for a home run.

It was the 10th win in 12 games for the Boston club, which has lost one fewer game than the Tigers.

Meanwhile, things continued to go bad for Chicago White Sox, who surged into the lead in the American League West and then started to skid.

Up against the leading Oakland Athletics Wednesday, the White Sox took a 9-1 thumping and are now four games in arrears.

The Chicago club couldn't do much with the offerings of left-hander Ken Holtzman and were never in contention after Athletics cracked through for a six-run third inning.

A two-run homer by Joe Rudi and a two-run double by pinch-hitter Don Mincher featured the uprising.

In the National League, Ken Singleton and Tim Foli, two former Mets, contributed key hits in Montreal Expos' 7-3 win over New York. Singleton and Foli hit run-scoring doubles in the third inning to help Mike Torrez to his 15th victory.

Keys Sticks with Training Camp Roster

VANCOUVER — B.C. Lions are 1-4 and last in the Western Football Conference but coach Eagle Keys is sticking with the players he selected in training camp.

His club ends a 13-day layoff tonight in Winnipeg and while not yet at full strength, the 24 players expected to start were all at training camp. A number of players were brought in for five-day trials, several managed to get into one game but only those who were with the club from the start have survived for tonight's key game.

Lions will have three players back from the injured list — defence-tackle Garrett Hunsperger, middle-linebacker Carl Weathers and Canadian-receiver Mike Leveille.

The return of Hunsperger, out since the start of the season because of knee cartilage had to be removed, and Weathers has been offset to an extent by the loss of two standout defence backs.

Mike Wilson is on the 30-day injured list because of a shoulder injury and Dave Easley, hampered all season because of a knee problem which can only be solved by surgery, is not listed among the starters.

Replacing them are versatile Rocky Long, a quarterback who has played in the offence and defence backfields for the Lions, and Larry Highbaugh.

Highbaugh, a speedy import receiver, almost made it as a defence back with Dallas Cowboys of the National Football League before he came to the Lions last season.

Tonight's game will be broadcast on radio stations CJVI (900) and CKWX (1130) starting at 6 p.m.

Wayne Matherne, Brian Donnelly and Wayne Holm complete the defence backfield, Ron Estay, Greg Findlay and Gary Robinson will be with Hunsperger on the defence line and Ray Nettles and George Anderson flank Weathers at the linebacking positions.

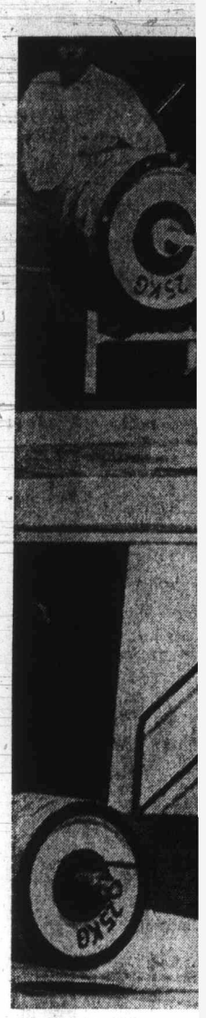

It will be the first time this season that the Lions have had their front defence seven in the lineup at the same time.

On offence, the speedy Leveille will replace Highbaugh at flanker in a backfield which will include Jim Evenson and rookies Monroe Eley and Johnny Musso as running backs.

Musso has seen only part-time action in the past few games because of dislocated toes and it isn't yet certain whether he will be able to operate at something close to peak efficiency.

Dave Denny and Jim Young will be the starting ends, Ken Sugarman and Dave Golinsky the tackles, Trev Ekdahl and Ted Wheeler the guards and Willie Postler the centre.

Don Moorhead, who has been throwing well in practices, is expected to start at quarterback with back-up Don Bunce as the 15th import.

DESPITE this unsuccessful first attempt, Vassili Alexeyev of Russia went to win the gold medal Wednesday night in the super heavyweight division of the Olympic weightlifting competition at Munich. Here he drops the bar and overturns.

Olympic Competition Loses Lustre In Wake of Terrorist Shootings

From OP

MUNICH — The 20th Summer Olympic Games, tragically interrupted for 24 hours, resumed quietly Wednesday with only a handful of the 8000 athletes taking part.

The competitors, stunned by the murder of 11 members of the Israeli team by an Arab terrorist band that invaded the Olympic Village Tuesday, tried to concentrate again on the winning of gold medals that, for the moment, had lost some of their lustre.

The remaining Israelis pulled out of their Olympic events and prepared to leave for home today. The Arab nations of Egypt, Syria and Kuwait also ordered their teams out of the Olympic Village.

Individual athletes of other nations also chose not to compete.

The only medals at stake Wednesday were in super heavyweight weightlifting and men's individual epee fencing, events left in limbo Tuesday when the Games were suspended.

CANADIAN KAYOED

The only Canadian in action was heavyweight Carroll Morgan of Antigonish, N.S., who was knocked out in the third round of his quarter-final bout by Hasse Thomsen of Sweden and lost his chance to become his country's first boxing medallist since 1932.

In a key match of the soccer tournament, Hungary's defending champions hammered West Germany, 4-1, for their second straight victory in their second-round pool, virtually clinching one of the final berths.

One more round of play remains before the two group winners clash for the gold medal Sunday night.

Vassili Alexeyev of Russia, the world champion, won the weightlifting title by a wide margin after his two chief rivals, Serge Reding of Bulgaria and Ken Patera of the United States, were eliminated in the early stages for failing to make a lift in three tries.

The epee championship was won by Dr. Csaba Fenyvesi, who brought Hungary its third gold medal of the Games.

MEDAL FORFEITED

American swimmer Rick Demont, 16, was stripped of the gold medal he won in the 400-metre freestyle swim because a test after the race showed the presence in his system of a drug forbidden to Olympic athletes. It was contained in a medication Demont takes for asthma.

The executive board of the International Olympic Committee first said Demont's medal would go to Brad Cooper of Australia, who finished second, but later decided no gold would be awarded.

A similar decision deprived the Netherlands of a bronze medal in the cycling team time trial after one of the Dutch cyclists turned in a positive drug test.

With the Games now a day behind, events which were originally scheduled for Wednesday will be held today and there's plenty of action — including seven track and field finals.

Glenda Reiser of Ottawa, Canada's best remaining hope for a track medal, runs in the women's 1500-metre semi-finals today with the final now set for Saturday.

Miss Reiser stunned the stadium crowd Monday when she broke the world record in finishing two strides behind Russia's world champion, Ludmila Bragina, in a heat. Miss Bragina set a new world record of four minutes, 6.5 seconds and Miss Reiser clocked 4:06.7.

Canada has three other competitors at the stadium today — Grant McLaren of Drumbo, Ont., and Bob Finlay of Toronto in the 5000-metre run and Gerry Moro of Trail in the decathlon.

Wrestlers Honor Slain Israelis

MUNICH (AP) — Posthumous gold medals were awarded Wednesday night by the International Amateur Wrestling Federation to four members of the Israeli team who were killed in a shootout between their Arab captors and police.

The awards were announced by the federation at the resumption of Olympic wrestling competition.

Those honored were Israeli coach Moshe Weinberg and captain Yosef Gollenfreund, who were awarded the federation's gold medal, and wrestlers Mark Slavin and Ekiezer Halfin, who received the gold medal of the wrestling world championship.

Cougars Cut Down To 20 Players At 'Rookie Camp'

EDMONTON — Victoria Cougars are down to 20 players at their "rookie camp" but several excellent prospects are included in the score remaining.

Fourteen of the original 34 players who turned out Monday at suburban Kenilworth Arena have been cut by Cougar scout Bob Briscoe, who is handling the workouts. Mitch Pechet, coach of the Western Canada Hockey League club, is watching from the stands and was suffering from influenza Wednesday.

HERE SEPT. 11

Briscoe said the camp will break Saturday and he will bring from 12 to 15 players with him to Victoria where the main training will take place at Memorial Arena beginning Sept. 11.

One of the Cougars' selections in the summer equalization draft, defenceman Randy Wray, has not yet reported to camp. Cougar general-manager Eric Bishop is attempting to contact the rugged defenceman, who was on the Flin Flon Bomber roster, today in Winnipeg.

Four goalkeepers are still working out at the camp but Briscoe expects to bring only two to the Island — Ron Bourcier and Glen Bueckert. Bourcier, a Nanaimo product, played with Kelowna Buckaroos of the B.C. Junior Hockey League and Bueckert was a BCJHL all-star last season with Penticton Broncos.

Cal Kitchings and Greg Steel were the most impressive defensive unit in Wednesday's scrimmage, Briscoe said. Kitchings is an 18-year-old from Winnipeg who played in the Saskatchewan Junior league last season and Steel played with Moose Jaw in bantam and junior leagues.

"Kitchings doesn't hit but he carries the puck very well," Briscoe stated.

BIG FORWARDS

Another outstanding prospect is Edmonton-forward Peter Morris, son of Frank Morris, a former Canadian Football League player. He has looked impressive despite a back ailment and a pulled leg muscle.

Also working out with the rookies are two Cougars from last season, Jim Atamanenko and George Pesut. Both decided to take in the camp to get a little conditioning-jump for the upcoming sessions in Victoria.

Canada Eliminated From World Soccer

MEXICO CITY (CP-AP) — The Mexican national soccer team defeated Canada 2-1 Wednesday night, eliminating the Canadians from qualifying play leading the World Cup tournament in 1974.

It was the third consecutive win for the Mexicans in North American elimination play for the World Cup. Canada was defeated 1-0 by the strong Mexican squad in Toronto and the Mexicans defeated the United States team 3-1 here Sunday.

With their close win over Canada, the Mexicans increased their points to six after three matches and advanced into the next round.

Canada have three points after four matches and the United States one point after three matches.

Mexico went to the attack early and halfback Cesareo Victorino scored in the 20th minute with a 30-yard shot which hit the crossbar and bounced in.

CANADA PULLS EVEN

But Canada equalized 20 minutes later on a magnificent shot from 25 yards by halfback Brian Robinson of Victoria, the ball streaked past the Mexican goalkeeper.

Large Entry Ready For Esquimalt Open

A large field of professionals is expected to complete this weekend in the annual Molson's Esquimalt Open tournament at Gorge Vale Golf Club.

Heading the list of 28 are Tom Moryson and Bob Cox, Jr., both of Vancouver. They shared $850 last weekend by tying for the top pro berth in the Metro Toyota-C-FAX Open at Cedar Hill Golf Club.

A total of $4,000 in prize money and merchandise, divided evenly between amateurs and pros, is being offered with first prize of $500 to the winning pro.

A shotgun start for the 220 competitors will be employed with some tees having two foursomes waiting to tee off.

SuperSonics Settle Contract Dispute

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Carolina Cougars of the American Basketball Association have agreed to accept in excess of $500,000 from Seattle SuperSonics of the National Basketball Association in settlement of a contract dispute involving player Jim McDaniels.

Cougar's information director, Ted Malick, said agreement was reached Tuesday freeing the former standout at Western Kentucky to play with Seattle.

The settlement also means that a half dozen suits and countersuits involving the two teams and two leagues will be dropped, Malick said.

No official terms of the settlement were released but "It is believed to have been ... in excess of $500,000," Malick said.

An ABA All-Star in his 1971-72 rookie season with the Cougars, McDaniels averaged 26.8 points and 14 rebounds in 58 games prior to his defection.

Best Fans Rejoicing

MANCHESTER, Eng. (UPI) — Controversial Irish soccer star George Best has confirmed he has signed a new contract with Manchester United "virtually for life."

The 26-year-old winger said the contract will cover the next six years. "I am obviously completely happy now at Old Trafford, pleased to be getting my form back on the field and I have signed for United now, virtually for life."

Top Tenpinner To Hold Clinics

One of the top women tenpinners in the United States will give clinics this weekend at Mayfair Lanes.

Helen Duval of Berkeley, Calif., a member of the Women's International Bowling Congress hall of fame, will conduct clinics Friday, Saturday and Sunday. The sessions are being sponsored by the Victoria Women's Tenpin Bowling Association.

Mrs. Duval, who was a guest speaker at Victoria's Sports Celebrity Dinner two years ago, will hold two sessions Friday, starting at 9:30 a.m. and 1 p.m., for women only.

Saturday's sessions will be for the youth bowlers. The 9:30 a.m. clinic is for junior and senior age groups and the 12:30 p.m. class for bantams.

Sunday's clinic, at 10:30 a.m., will be open to all interested. At 2 p.m., a special clinic for advanced bowlers will be held.

Travellers' Event Set for Saturday

Irish Tourists Crush UVic Vikings

By MAX LOW

Fast, polished? Well, perhaps they weren't.

But no one could accuse Queen's University Rugby Club of Belfast of not having determination.

And that was enough to crush University of Victoria Vikings, 28-0, in an exhibition match Wednesday night.

With the big hockey game on television, only about 250 fans turned up at Centennial Stadium to watch the Vikings make a brave bid to stop the Northern Ireland team win its fourth game of a seven-match tour of Alberta and B.C.

Queen's, a club side made up of past and present students, defeated Edmonton All-Stars, 24-13, downed Calgary All-Stars, 20-0, and then blasted Nanaimo, 38-0 in their first three games.

For a long time Wednesday night it looked as though the Irish boys weren't going to get things quite so much their own way.

Queen's won a feast of the ball from scrums, rucks and lineouts and dominated the game territorially throughout. But, on the narrow UVic field, scrum half Colin Grimshaw couldn't get his backline going at all.

When the visiting backs did run the ball, they just didn't have the pace to get around their opponents.

CAPTAIN SCORES

Captain Harry Steele, a robust and experienced No. 8 forward, barged over for a try midway through the first half and fullback Doug Rea converted.

Vikings, made up of eight players just back from a rugby tour of Australia and Fiji and several former students who now play for Victoria clubs, didn't wilt.

With some great tackling by the forwards, particularly Rob Hindson, Gary Johnson and Gaither Zinkan, and backs Jim Wenman and Al Foster, Vikings kept the score to 6-0 until 15 minutes from the end of the game.

That's when all that determination paid off.

"Mr. Persistence" himself — fullback Rea — who had been thwarted on so many occasions when he shot into the line, finally burst through for a try and converted it.

That started it. Less than a minute later, winger Sid Watmouth intercepted a pass and streaked over for a try in the corner.

He was followed over by hooker Dave Carson and prop Peter Torrie and Rea converted two of the tries as Queen's piled on 22 points in a final 15-minute burst.

Next on the agenda is a game against the University of British Columbia Thunderbirds in Vancouver Saturday and the visitors end their tour against Victoria Crimson Tide at Royal Athletic Park next Tuesday.

UVic Vikings — Al Foster, Rick Rollins, Jim Wenman, Chris Mills, Dave Leonard, Dave Hutchins, Mike Hutchinson, Ken Wilke, Neil Bonnell, Lee Doney, Rob Hindson, Gary Johnson, Frenk Carsons, Rick Steick, Gaither Zinkan.

Referee — Jan Curnow, Victoria.

Evert Ousts Russian In U.S. Open Thriller

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — Chris Evert, the 17-year-old sensation from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., had to survive a third-set tie-breaker to eliminate rallying Russian Olga Morozova Wednesday in a quarter-final match in the United States Open tennis championships.

Miss Evert, the No. three seed, had to break the Russian's service in the 12th game to force the tie-breaker, then flashed through it to win 3-6, 6-3, 7-6.

The young blonde, joined defending champion Billie Jean King of Long Beach, Calif., Australian veteran Margaret Court and ninth-seeded Kerry Melville of Australia in the women's semi-finals.

Mrs. King, the current Wimbledon queen and No. one seed, will play Mrs. Court, a six-time champion, while Miss Evert goes against Miss Melville.

Mrs. King advanced with a 6-2, 7-5 victory over eighth-seeded Virginia Wade of Great Britain; Mrs. Court had to work for a 6-4, 4-6, 6-4 decision over Rosemary Calas, the No. 3 seed from San Francisco, and Miss Melville eliminated up-setminded Pam Teeguarden of Los Angeles, 6-0, 6-2.

Miss Teeguarden had reached the quarter-finals with a stunning upset over second-seeded Evonne Goolagong in a third round match.

In men's fourth round action, unseeded Tom Gorman of Seattle and Roscoe Tanner, a Stanford student from Lookout Mountain, Tenn., joined three other Americans in the round of eight.

Tanner, a 20-year-old lefty, turned back John Cooper of Australia 6-2, 7-6, 7-6, while Gorman breezed over Dick Stockton of Port Washington, N.Y., 6-4, 6-3, 6-3.

The once-dominant Australians managed to get only one player in the quarter-finals, laconic veteran Fred Stolle, who continued his string of upsets with a 4-6, 7-6, 6-4, 7-6 victory over 11th seeded Cliff Drysdale of South Africa.

NHL Sets Pre-Season Schedule

MONTREAL (CP) — National Hockey League teams will play 74 pre-season exhibition games in 40 towns and cities beginning Sept. 17 before opening the regular 1972-73 season, the league announced Wednesday.

The pre-season schedule provides for five more games than last year and is five short of the record 79 played in 1967.

Boston, Minnesota, Montreal and Philadelphia will play the maximum 10 pre-season games which the league permits.

Boston, Toronto and Vancouver will play three of the games in their home rinks.

Atlanta Flames, a new entry, opens its training camp Sept. 10 at Drummondville, Que., the earliest camp opening.

Registration On Saturday

Registration for Gorge Juvenile Soccer Association will take place Saturday at Hampton Park.

Boys aged from five to 17 wishing to play soccer are welcome to register during the three-hour session.

Bring your camper on this 20-hour inside passage mini-cruise

Travellers have called it "the most spectacular coastal scenery in the world!" It's the North Pacific's island-sheltered Inside Passage, first discovered by early Spanish explorers. Now, sail it on the Queen of Prince Rupert, northbound or southbound, between Kelsey Bay on the northern tip of Vancouver Island, and Prince Rupert, the world's third-largest natural port, just below the Alaska panhandle.

Enjoy your own private stateroom, dine on fresh B.C. salmon aboard a sleek, cruise-like ship noted for friendly service. Photograph soaring mountain peaks, massive glaciers, mountain waterfalls and forest-clad islets.

Then, with your own camper, car or trailer, return via paved Canadian highways along the Totem Circle from Prince Rupert. Visit 'Ksan, famed authentic re-creation of an ancient Indian village. Set your sights on big game. Fishing? The best! You may even see black bear scooping steelhead from the mighty Skeena River. Pass through old gold-rush country, sampling Cariboo country beef-steak along the way. Then head down the lovely Fraser River Valley to Vancouver and home. Or . . . do the trip in reverse.

Queen of Prince Rupert Schedule

Summer sailings to Sept. 21, northbound and southbound on alternate days. Winter sailings Sept. 23 - May 5, northbound leave Kelsey Bay Tues. and Thurs. Southbound leave Prince Rupert Wed. and Sat. Off-season save 25% on fares – car, camper, trailer, passenger, and staterooms, too!
Motor coach service for all points at both terminals.

Spitz Considering Career as a Movie Actor

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Mark Spitz, the hero of the Munich Olympics with seven gold medals in swimming, returned to the United States Wednesday on a direct flight from London but made no comments on the tragic events at the games.

As Spitz and his coach Sherman Chavoor came out of customs, a wedge of a half-dozen airport police preceded them.

"Come on, Mark," said Chavoor, as the swimmer hung back when confronted by a crowd of approximately 100 persons, mostly newsmen and photographers.

Spitz was wearing a mustard colored turtleneck shirt and brown slacks. He appeared strained and a little ill at ease at the crowd which greeted him. Among them were numerous teenagers and as he walked through the terminal, a shout of "Mazeltov," the Jewish good luck, salutation, was heard.

In a London interview, earlier, Spitz had said he might become a movie actor.

Spitz has been described as a "Jewish Omar Sharif" and was so popular with the fans that he was taken from the Munich swimming hall in a limosine to avoid being mobbed.

Asked at a news conference about his plans, he gave a guarded reply.

"There are lots of negotiations going on with various concerns," he said. Then he would not compete in the added there was a possibility he might become a film actor. — "The idea intrigues me."

Henley Shines in New Post

TORONTO (CP) — No one ever questioned the value of Garney Henley in the Hamilton defensive backfield, but his performance on offence for the Tiger-Cats in Canadian Football League play this year raises the question of why the transition wasn't made earlier.

Henley had been on defence for the Ticats for 13 seasons, with only occasional assignments as an offensive receiver, but Hamilton's new coach, Jerry Williams, made the veteran speedster a permanent flanker.

The move has proved one of the Ticats' biggest successes this season and Henley now is the leading yardage gainer among receivers in the Eastern Conference, according to CFL statistics released this week.

The 34-year-old Henley has caught 14 passes for 458 yards, an average of 32.7 yards a catch. Two of those catches gave Henley touchdowns in Hamilton's 17-16 victory over Ottawa Rough Riders Monday and Henley now ranks fourth in EFC scoring with four touchdowns.

Still leading the EFC's receivers in number of passes caught in Toronto Argonaut Mike Eben who has hauled in 24 for 301 yards.

Split end George McGowan from University of Kansas, only a second-year man with Edmonton Eskimos, is the leading ground-gainer among the Western Conference receivers with 517 yards on 26 catches.

Next in line, and leading the EFC, is kicker Jerry Organ of Ottawa with 50 points on 13 field goals, seven converts and four singles.

General manager Rogers Lehew said the releasing of Atamian could work in one of two ways in giving the defending Grey Cup champions a new life.

"It gives us a flexibility in deciding on the use of other imports and it will make the new imports here for a tryout work harder."

Western Bowlers Masters Champs

Betty Chiuppi of Drumheller kept the women's title in Alberta by winning all three of her matches after finishing third out of four in the eight-game preliminary round. She defeated Vera Lysne of Victoria, 266-199; downed Isabel Koch of Saskatoon, 272-189; and finished with a 210-199 victory over Millie Evans of Toronto, the top qualifier.

Both the men's and women's titles were won last year by Albertans, Marg Henderson of Calgary and Jack Smeed of Lethbridge.

Lemyre, finishing last in the preliminary event, edged Doug Cain of Toronto, 239-238, in the opening game, beat Bill Murphy of Edmonton, 296-270, and took the title with a 263-195 decision over Vic Smith of Saskatoon.

It was the fourth renewal of the annual event which was held during Vancouver's Pacific National Exhibition the first four years.

Lemyre's victory brought British Columbia its second title in the championships' history. Helen Robinson of Vancouver won in 1970.

Saanich Tops Tourney

CHILLIWACK — Saanich Braves carried off the Sam Jimmie Memorial Trophy when the three-day all-Indian invitational soccer tournament ended Monday.

Braves, who play in Division II of the Victoria and District Soccer League, downed Sasquatch of Chilliwack, 4-1, in the final of the 13-team tourney.

Frank Cooper of Saanich was named the tournament's most valuable goalkeeper and clubmate Curtis Olsen, who scored seven goals in three games, took the top scoring award.

Duncan Native Sons beat North Shore of Vancouver, 2-1, in the consolation final.

Threat to Jobs

Ottawa Feels Pressure In Ship Issue

OTTAWA (CP) — Shipping and labor groups are mounting pressure on the government to reserve coastal trade for Canadian ships.

The Seafarers' International Union of Canada and the Dominion Marine Association recently submitted briefs to the government calling for action on the Darling report which recommended shutting out foreign-flag vessels from Canadian coastal trade.

The report was prepared for the Canadian transport commission by consultant H. J. Darling and made public in May, 1971. The government has not yet acted on the recommendations.

Leonard McLaughlin, SIU president, said Wednesday failure to keep coastal trade for Canadian ships could mean loss of as many as 120,000 jobs for Canadian sailors and shore workers.

The DMA, which represents Canadian-flag vessels in the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway, said the government should act now while plans to develop the Arctic are in their infancy. There were also signs of expansions in coastal shipping on both East and West coasts.

"If foreign interests are permitted to become too firmly entrenched, it will be increasingly difficult for Canada to take action as time goes on," the association said.

McLaughlin said that if Canada does not stake out the coastal trade for itself, exploitation of northern resources and underwater mineral finds on the Atlantic coast could be taken over by foreign interests.

If foreign-flag vessels handle shipping in these areas it could mean 20,000 Canadian sailors and 100,000 Canadian shore workers would be shut out of jobs, the union leader said.

The SIU brief said the Commonwealth Shipping Agreement of 1931 has been "negligently applied" by the government.

While other Commonwealth nations had shoved the agreement aside, the government was still allowing Commonwealth vessels to compete for Canadian coastal trade.

McLaughlin said some ships flying Commonwealth flags employ non-Canadians and pay lower wages than Canadian firms in carrying cargo between Canadian ports.

He said 1,000 Canadian sailors are unemployed as a result of the Canadian interpretation of the agreement.

McLaughlin said that under the agreement the government can require foreign-flag vessels to abide by Canadian laws within Canadian coastal waters. This would mean hiring Canadian sailors and paying Canadian wages.

The SIU urged the government to end the agreement within 12 months as other Commonwealth countries have. In the meantime, foreign-flag ships should be required to abide by Canadian law, the union said.

Both the union and the DMA said main opposition to the Darling proposals comes from the Atlantic provinces.

They said the Atlantic provinces appear to fear higher transportation costs if Commonwealth vessels are barred from Canadian coast trade.

N-Stand Sound: Harkness

OTTAWA (CP) — Douglas Harkness, former defence minister whose resignation Feb. 3, 1963, helped topple a government, still insists that the pro-nuclear stand he took then was "sound."

Getting ready to leave Ottawa after a 27-year parliamentary career, the Progressive Conservative MP for Calgary Centre said in an interview Wednesday he did not think he would have "done anything differently" if he had the great nuclear debate of 10 years ago to live through again.

At the same time he charged that the present Liberal government committed a "great mistake" in cutting Canada's contribution to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization two years ago and said the Canadian Armed Forces no longer have the strength to meet their commitments.

Harkness, who has decided against seeking re-election in the Oct. 30 federal vote, is one of Parliament's three longest-serving members.

The only MP who has sat longer is former prime minister John Diefenbaker, from whose cabinet Harkness resigned over the issue of giving Canadian Forces a nuclear capability.

Diefenbaker has been in Parliament since 1940 and plans to run again. Harkness and Liberal MP Jean Richard (Ottawa East), who has also decided against seeking re-election, have been MPs since 1945.

Harkness favored purchasing the warheads for nuclear weapon systems which had already been obtained from the United States and backed his position to the point of resigning.

Two days after his resignation, on Feb. 5, 1963, the government fell on a Commons non-confidence vote and lost the ensuing election to the Liberals under Lester Pearson, who took office with a minority government.

Asked what effect the disagreement had on his subsequent relations with Diefenbaker, the retiring MP said: "There haven't been any relations. He walks by me as if he has never seen me before."

And Harkness himself long since ceased greeting the former prime minister. "I stopped that when I found I was being cut dead."

Harkness said nuclear weapons were part of the NATO deterrent, and it was the "great hope" in the early 1960s that, in the face of this deterrent, the Soviet Union would refrain from any kind of attack on the West.

This position has been vindicated, he maintained.

Harkness said that the decision of the present government to cut Canadian forces in Europe by half and relieve them of their nuclear weapons "materially reduced" Canada's leverage in world affairs.

High-Noise Area Bans Could Affect Sidney

The whole of Sidney may be affected by a Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation clampdown on loans for housing in high-noise areas near airports.

The CMHC said from Ottawa Wednesday that it has adopted a new lending policy based on "forecasts of noise exposure" at a series of Canadian airports, including Victoria International Airport.

Noise level readings taken by the federal transport department will be the deciding factor.

And John Bruce, owner of Sidney Realty, said Wednesday it was going to be "pretty difficult" for the corporation to judge just how much noise was enough to stop a housing loan.

Bruce didn't know how the measuring would be done but he said all of the town of Sidney would be involved and he would wait to see how it turned out.

Another realtor in Sidney agreed that the town would have to be included in airport noise readings because of its nearness to the landing field.

The CMHC said it would deny loans for houses planned in high-noise areas near runways and might deny loans in lower-noise areas if sound insulation plans were judged inadequate.

Sewer Lending Approved, $3.3 Million for Region

The Capital Regional Board's committee of the whole has recommended that the board authorize the Municipal Finance Authority to borrow $3.3 million for the completion of various sewage projects in Greater Victoria.

About $1.5 million of the total amount is requested as additional financing; the rest was authorized some time ago.

The money is to be used for sewage projects in Sidney and Saanich.

The finance authority was formed several years ago to enable municipalities and regional boards to obtain loans at relatively low interest rates.

The authority is essentially a credit pool of all municipalities. This means that a small village may get loans at an interest rate based on the credit rating of all municipalities combined.

Warships Begin Exercise

Four Esquimalt-based ships and two long-range Argus patrol aircraft from CFB Comox are taking part in a two-week anti-submarine exercise which began at Honolulu Tuesday.

The exercise, named RIMPAC 72, involves about 8,000 men from Canada, Australia, New Zealand and the United States.

"The purpose of the exercise is training," says Vice-Admiral E. P. Aurand, Command of Anti-Submarine Warfare Forces U.S. Pacific Fleet. "It will also give the nations an opportunity to test tactical doctrine and interchange new ideas."

Canadian vessels involved include the destroyer-escorts Gatineau and Qu'Appelle, fleet support ship Provider and submarine Rainbow. The exercise will give the recently modernized Gatineau an opportunity to test all her new systems.

Dockers' Truce Uneasy

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Maritime Employers Association and the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union are to meet in contract talks Wednesday as work slowly gets back to normal on west coast docks.

Ed Strang, spokesman for the maritime employers, said Wednesday the union has agreed to resume the talks. Don Gracia, Canadian area president of the ILWU, was unavailable for comment.

spokesman for the maritime employers, said Wednesday the union has agreed to resume the talks. Don Garcia, Canadian area president of the ILWU, was unavailable for comment.

Strang said he had no new proposals to put before the union in the dispute, which led to a strike in west coast ports that was temporarily settled by back-to-work legislation passed in Parliament.

The dock workers went back for their first full day on the job Tuesday after the strike, which began Aug. 23. Vancouver workers had been off the job since Aug. 7 in a dispute over hiring hall procedures.

The union has asked for a raise of 50 cents an hour over a one-year contract of basic rates of $5 to $5.30 an hour. The employers are understood to have offered a three-year contract, with a raise of 30 cents an hour in the first year and 25 cents in each of the next two years.

There is also the hiring hall problem to be settled. The union is unhappy with the size of the regular work force which reports directly to the employers each day. The union says it wants other men to be trained to handle these jobs as well.

The employers say a regular work force is necessary because a man must do the same job each day, particularly if new equipment is involved.

There were 53 gangs working on Vancouver's docks Wednesday. Strang said some gangs were brought in from New Westminster to help out with work.

He said grain loading was operating at near maximum capacity.

"We have 15 belts working which is about maximum, and 10 ships are being loaded," he said.

Another 12 grain ships are waiting. There is no storage problem for goods as most of the sheds were empty when work stopped four weeks ago, he said.

Dorymen Intent On Hawaii Trip

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Two young sailors, who were to leave at midnight to row 2,600 miles to Hawaii, are paying no heed to comments by two Britons who rowed 8,000 miles to Australia.

Pat Quesnel, 23, of La Push, Wash., and Steve Eubank, 21, of Pleasant Hills, Calif., will be aboard the 22-foot dory Hawaii Ki which the former spent $10,000 to design and claims is "unsinkable."

They expect to take 80 days for their trip, compared with the nearly one year John Fairfax and Sylvia Cook required on their journey down under from San Francisco.

Miss Cook, 33, said she wouldn't sail on any more small boats, adding, "I've definitely had enough. I was either bored stiff or frightened out of my mind."

Said the 35-year-old Fairfax, "I won't touch an oar again as long as I live."

But both said they were glad they made their challenging voyage in the 35-foot rowboat, Britannia II.

Quesnel simply says, "I decided to do this and not spend the rest of my life just wishing I'd done it."

He and his original shipmate, Pete Dorrish, 21, also of La Push, left the Seattle area June 18, but were slammed about by storms off the Oregon coast.

Dorrish was in hospital with a knee infection and Eubank offered to step in and fill the breech in the back-breaking attempt.

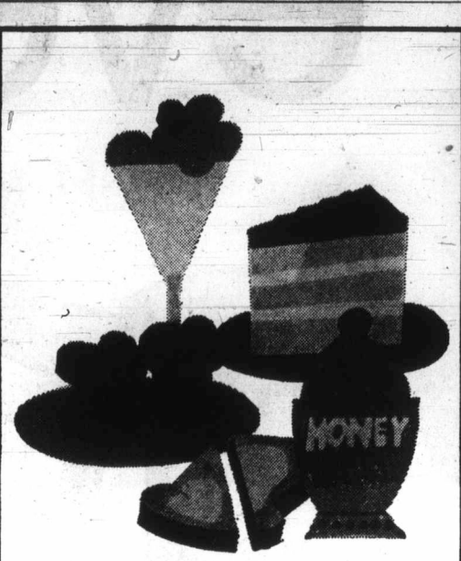

U.S. Firms Termed 'Cry Babies'

EDMONTON (CP) — Pepsi Cola and Coca Cola, two American-based international soft drink companies, have fought tooth-and-nail against the development of an effective return system for beverage containers, Environment Minister Bill Yurko said Tuesday.

Yurko said the firms have refused to co-operate with his department and have become "cry babies" because they recognize that the establishment of a sound universal return depot system "may have international implications; they may catch on."

The minister announced last week that a system of universal depots would be set up effective Jan. 1 to receive all brands of soft drink containers for refunds in addition to liquor and wine bottles.

Brandon Inquiry:

Racial Charges Unproved

BRANDON (CP) — A commission looking into allegations of racial discrimination and police harassment in Brandon recommends a comprehensive native migration system to assist native people wishing to settle in cities.

The program, to be administered by the Manitoba Indian Brotherhood and the Manitoba Metis Federation, would be funded by the provincial government and coupled with another program of increased opportunity in rural areas to reduce the incentive to move into the cities.

The report of the single-member inquiry commission by James Toal, former superintendent of the Winnipeg police department and now director of services for the Alcoholism Foundation of Manitoba, was released Wednesday by Attorney-General A. H. Mackling.

While declaring no evidence proving police harassment was given to the inquiry, the report said there is a widespread feeling among native people that such a situation exists.

It recommended establishment of a police academy in Manitoba to train law enforcement personnel including "a significant number" of native candidaties, and that the education department work out a specialized program to help candidates for the academy upgrade their educational requirements.

Assistance in urban migration would involve an expanded role for friendship centres, provision of hostels; inspections of homes rented under public assistance; construction of low-rental housing for native posple with option to purchase; recreational and cultural programs, and stepped-up alcoholism and counselling services.

On relations with Indian and Metis people, the report said there is no evidence to show that this western Manitoba city of 32,000 should be singled out for charges of racism or is any different in this respect from other communites in the province.

But it adds there is insufficient knowledge and understanding in the community about the problems faced by native people.

"This manifest lack of knowledge and understanding is evident in the inadequate manner in which the problems encountered in Brandon were handled. Furthermore, although the city of Brandon presented a brief dealing with the problems raised at the inquiry, it did not offer any suggestions for solution of the problems." It added'

"Problems in the native community should not be dealt with on a crisis basis.

"It is prudent that careful attention be given to problems such as those that occurred in Brandon, and long-term government planning should strive to avoid similar occurrences elsewhere.

Disarm Police—Union

MONTREAL (CP) — The Quebec government should order most of the province's policemen to take off their guns, the Montreal Central Council of the Confederation of National Trade Unions said Tuesday night.

The council voted during a general meeting to ask Justice Minister Jerome Choquette to order the disarmament of police except for "certain special squads" which would remain armed.

Meanwhile, Rene Monette, treasurer of Laval's Police Brotherhood, said Tuesday the brotherhood wants shotguns placed in police cars.

Hotel Staff Provincial Or Federal?

OTTAWA (CP) — The Chateau Laurier, one of Ottawa's best-known hotels, is embroiled in a labor dispute with staff that is complicated by a question of whether the employees are under federal or provincial jurisdiction.

Officials of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers (CBRT) are hopeful that all their CN hotel members will be put under federal labor laws which they feel are generally more favorable to employees than those of the provinces.

The 400 members of the CBRT local at the Chateau are awaiting results of a provincial conciliation board established to resolve 12 contract issues, including wages, still in dispute.

Before the union can use their ultimate weapon, the legal strike, the members, including desk clerks, waiters, launderers, kitchen employees and others, must await the board's report.

The Chateau staff receives an average wage of $2.03 an hour, a union spokesman said. The union is hoping for a two-year contract with a 10-per-cent wage increase the first year, and an eight-per-cent pay boost the second year.

CBRT officials feel that because the CNR is a federal Crown corporation, the federal government is obliged to see CN employees are "fairly treated."

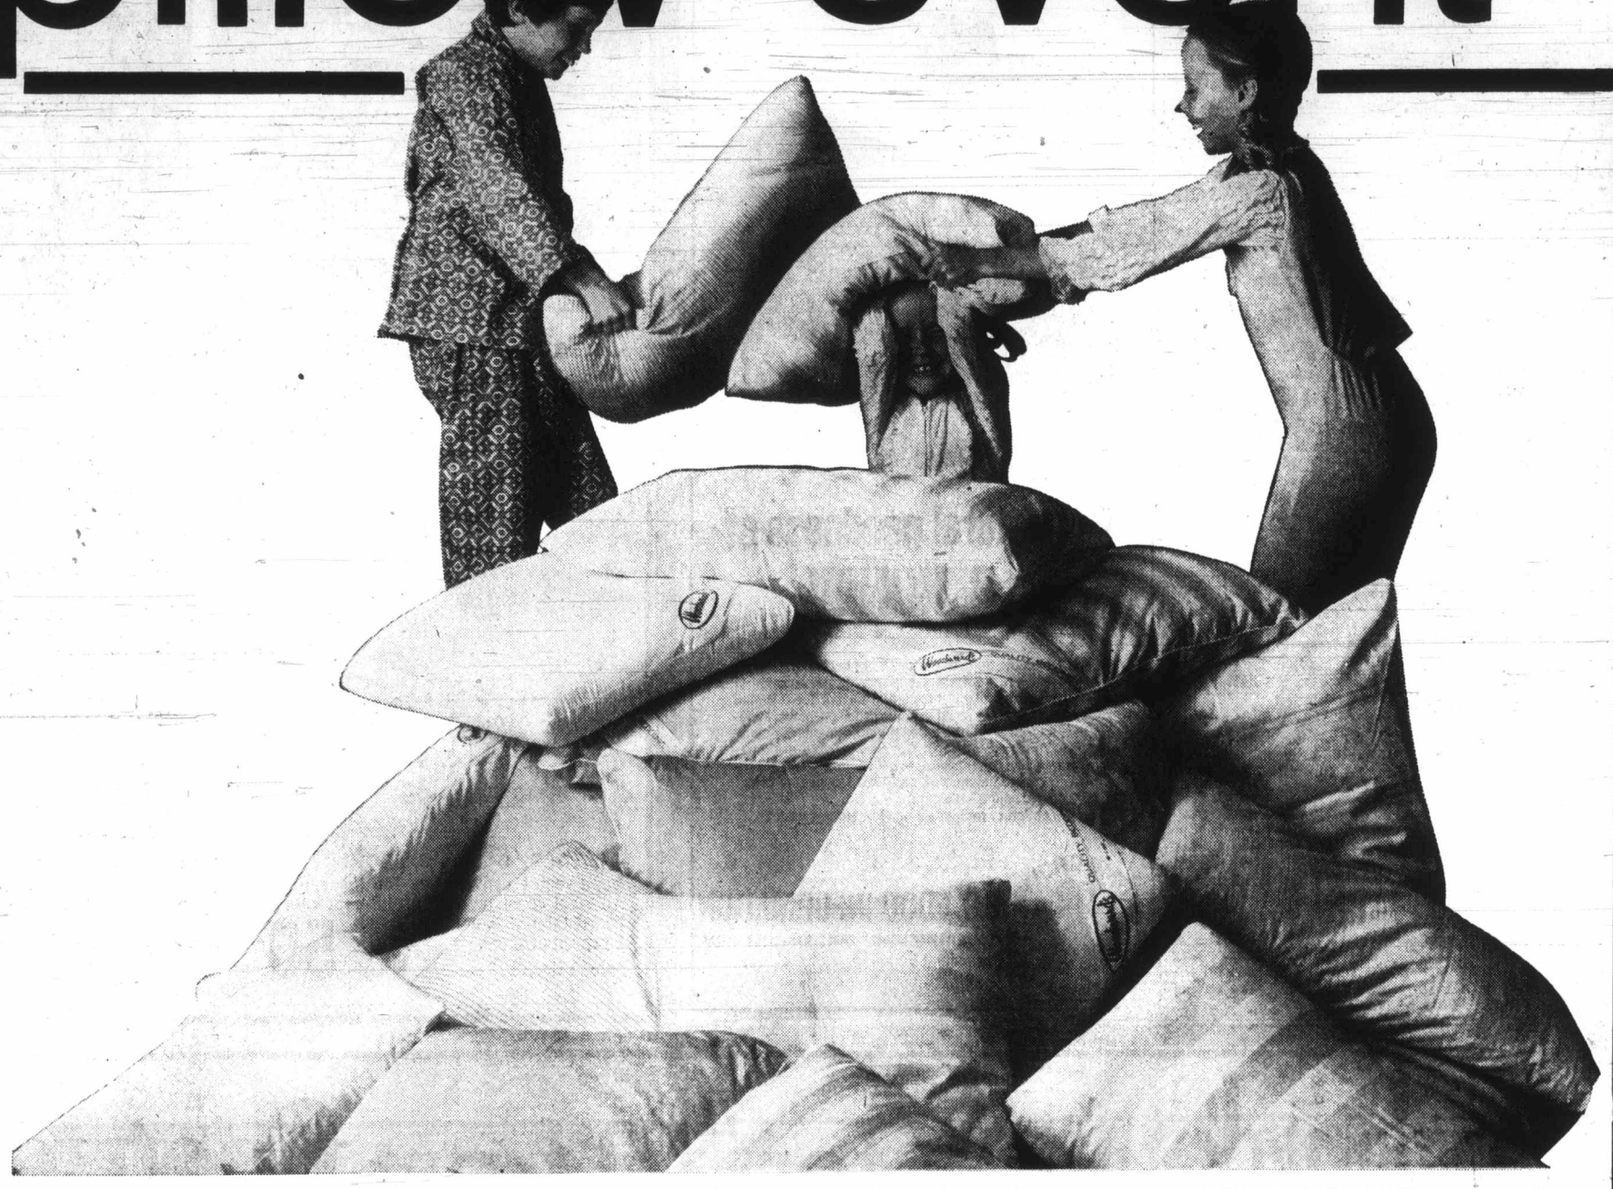

Car Plunge Kills Driver

GOLDEN (CP) — Barry Craig Steadman, 20, of Surrey, was killed when the car he was driving left the Trans-Canada Highway and plunged 400 feet down an embankment about 10 miles east of here. A passenger in the car, Sheralyn Marsden, 20, also of Surrey, was in good condition in hospital.

Collision Causes Oil Spill, But . . .

Risk Factor Lessens

LES ESCOUMINS, Que. (CP) — Oil spreading over a section of the St. Lawrence River near this community 150 miles northeast of Quebec City poses less risk to the environment than earlier expected, federal transport department officials said Wednesday.

The oil, spilled when the grain ship Aegis Wisdom was almost cut in half in a collision Saturday, is an "intermediate" variety rather than heavy fuel oil, a department spokesmas said. However, transport department crews were trying to recover and contain spilled oil and pump out tanks on the ship's starboard side to prevent worse problems should the ship break up.

"The crews are doing their best to contain the oil already spilled but the winds are pretty high and the weather is against us," a department spokesman said Tuesday.

He said it was impossible to estimate how much oil had been spilled from tanks on the ship's port side after it collided with the Italian ship Libra.

The Libra continued to Montreal after suffering only slight damage.

Transport department officials say they will let the oil drift out to sea if necessary.

"It should dissipate pretty fast and there are no land areas immediately threatened by the oil," a spokesman said.

Toronto To Analyse Car Ban

TORONTO (CP) — The Metropolitan Toronto transportation committee decided Tuesday to ask the Ontario government to supply reports that will show the impact of banning all private automobiles from the city.

The committee turned down a suggestion from True Davidson, mayor of East York, that the city should ban private automobiles from a central-core section of the city that would include Queen's Park.

The committee wants to know how people employed in automobile-related industries would be retrained for new jobs; how much compensation the city would receive from lost revenue currently derived from private parking lots; the economic effect on residents from land-use changes and how the province would assist the city to improve public transportation.

Alberta:

'Adult' Books Case Closed

CALGARY (CP) — Attorney-General Merv Leitch said Wednesday a Calgary case regarding "adult reading" material is closed unless the books' distributor, United News, wants to reopen it by putting them back on the market.

And a spokesman for United News said the company would welcome a test case in the courts if the province agreed.

"We're not certain what we're going to do right now, but we want to avoid notoriety," the spokesman said.

"All the same, many Albertans would welcome a test case to discover what the climate is in the province in dealing with obscenity."

In such a case, the books themselves would be charged with "undue expolitation of sex" under the Criminal Code. United News would not be charged as a criminal agent.

Calgary's police morality squad, said Leitch, acted "perfectly legitimately" when it warned United News that obscenity charges could be laid. He had ordered Calgary police last week to submit a report describing their procedure.

The withdrawal of books by United News came to the attorney-general's attention after Harry's News and Billy's News and Smoke Shop complained that police action dried up their supply without charges being laid.

The books are off the shelves, said Leitch, not because of police pressure but because of a United News decision.

"United News is perfectly free to dispute the police opinion and continue to wholesale the books. It's their business if they want to test the police opinion in court."

He said he prefers the police to proceed independently and consult the book distributors, giving them a chance to act on their own to avoid charges.

"Really, if we left it entirely in the hands of the booksellers, and didn't proceed with warnins and consultations, self-censorship would lead to tighter bans on literature."

The books involved, United News said, came from a publisher specializing in the type.

Guilty Plea Entered By Store

SASKATOON (CP) — A city bookstore Wednesday entered a plea of guilty on a charge of possessing obscene material for the purpose of sale.

Judge E. C. Boychuk, in magistrate's court, reserved imposing a penalty to Friday after the plea was entered on behalf of A and A Books. The charge was laid after city police seized magazines and paperback books May 17.

The defence originally pleaded not guilty but requested time to reconsider its position.

Defence counsel Robert Finlay told Boychuk he wished the case to be treated in the same manner as that against the Adelphi Bookstore, fined $100 Aug. 18 on a charge of selling obscene material.

PICKLED BABY BEETS

4 quarts small beets
3 cups vinegar
2 cups water
2½ cups sugar
2 tsp. whole allspice
1 stick cinnamon
½ tsp. whole cloves
1 tsp. pickling salt

Wash beets thoroughly, cut off leaves, leaving 1 inch stem and top roots, to prevent loss of colour when beets are cooked. Add cold water to cover, bring to a boil, simmer, covered until just tender—about 30 to 45 minutes, depending upon age and size of vegetables. Drain and plunge into cold water; slip off skins and stems. Slice or quarter, or if small, leave whole. Heat sugar, vinegar, water and spices just to scalding point; add beets and heat until steaming hot. Pack beets into hot, sterilized jars. Add pickling solution to cover. Seal immediately. Makes 8 pints.

Fifty Nutrients Required for Your Good Health

Colonist-Copley Service

Like a house, the human body needs a firm foundation to stand the test of time. It needs all the essential nutrients, in the right amounts, to function adequately.

There are 50 or more known nutrients needed for good health and all are available from the foods we eat.

Each nutrient has certain specific jobs in building, upkeep and operation of the body. These jobs cannot be done by other nutrients any more than a stronger roof on a house can make up for a weak foundation.

An extra supply of one cannot make up for a shortage of another. Though high in protein, an extra serving of meat cannot take the place of a serving of a citrus fruit that supplies vitamin C.

How can you be sure you get all the nutrients your body needs and in the right amounts?

The basic four food groups plan is a simple one devised by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, and when followed provides a strong foundation upon which to build healthy bodies. It is based on the standards of the Recommended Dietary Allowances of the National Academy of Science — National Research Council, Washington, D.C.

The groups work together to supply energy and nutrients necessary for health and growth.

The four groups are the milk group, meat group, vegetables and fruits group and breads and cereals group.

The key nutrient contributions of the four food groups include: milk group — riboflavin, calcium, and protein; meat group — thiamin, niacin, protein, and iron; vegetable and fruit group — vitamin A and vitamin C; and bread-

To assure your family gets an adequate amount of nutrients include the following minimum daily servings from these four food groups: milk, at least two servings for adults (children will need more); meat group, two or more servings; vegetable-fruit group, four or more servings; bread or cereal, four or more servings. Include a dark green or deep yellow vegetable for fruit at least three to four times a week for vitamin A, plus a vitamin C-rich food daily.

By following the recommended amounts as suggested by the plan, the guesswork is taken out of assembling menus that include all the essential nutrients.

And the plan works for everyone — infant, nursing mother, growing teen, middle-aged man or retired person.

The milk group is the only group where the recommended daily amounts vary according to age. They are:

Three or more glasses for children (smaller glasses for some children under 8).

Four or more glasses for teen-agers.

Two or more glasses for adults.

Three or more glasses for pregnant women.

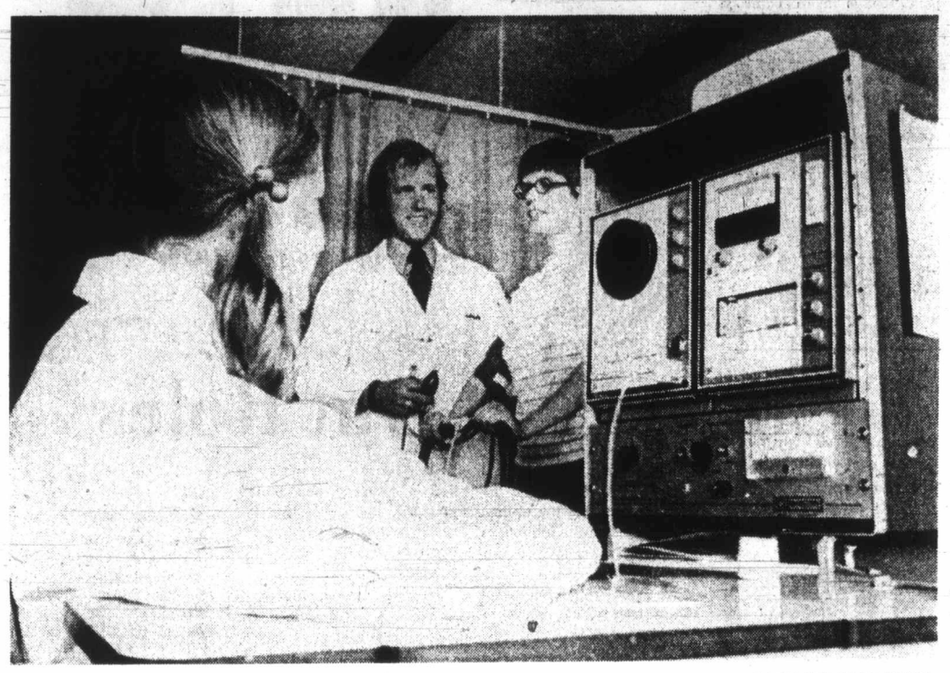

Four or more glasses for nursing women.

One glass is eight ounces or one cup. The minimum amounts supply three-quarters or more of the day's calcium recommended for good nutrition.

Milk comes in many forms including whole, skim, butterfat, evaporated, nonfat dry milk, chocolate milk or dairy drink. Buttermilk and no fat dry milk lack most or all the fat of milk and its fat-soluble vitamin A, and provide fewer calories. Most skim milk is fortified with vitamins A and D and some has extra milk solids.

But it is not necessary to meet the recommended amounts of milk only by drinking it.

Fitness Test

University of Victoria is conducting pilot project to evaluate physical fitness of people before they embark on exercise bouts, under sponsorship of national health and welfare department. Program titled Shape-Up started Tuesday and will run for two weeks at UVic. Here technician Peg Van Alstine and project assistant supervisor Paul Thomas run tests for Bernadette Harris.

Sculptor Vanquishes Death Camp Torment

MONTREAL (CP) — Alice Winant is one of Canada's busiest sculptors. She is able to sell more than she is able to produce, although she does not measure her success in commercial terms.

Prime Minister Trudeau owns one of her pieces. Others either adorn her suburban Hampstead home or the celebrated Musee Rodin in Paris.

Her works are jaunty men or soft, stylistic nudes in polished bronze; they reveal more than anything her gifts of spontaneity and a continuous meditation on life.

Talent exposed itself in Alice Winant late in life.

She has spent the last 25 years trying to forget the horrors of Nazi concentration camps such as Auschwitz and Bergen-Belsen during the Second World War.

There have been many things to think about and Alice Winant has done a lot of thinking.

She was born in the small town of Targu Mures, Romania, where her father was a grain merchant. By the time she was 18, she had established her own portrait and fashion photography studio.

But one day the Nazis came and led the family away — the price of being Jewish.

Alice, her mother and sister went one way, her brother and father went the other.

Her father died in the ovens of Dachau; she, her mother and sister stayed together at both Auschwitz and Bergen-Belsen. Her job was to lug sacks of potatoes from trucks.

"The funny thing is that when you have to do these things, you can," she said.

"You seem to find tremendous strength."

At one point, Alice became too ill to stand up each morning and be counted by the guards. When her mother and sister lacked the strength to hold her up, she was allowed to lie in front of her barracks.

"How they forgot to kill me I'll never know," she said.

selected for the gas chamber; three times she was re-

Alice Winant

Three times her mother was prieved. And when British troops finally liberated Bergen-Belsen in 1945, Alice was removed by the Red Cross to Stockholm where she spent two years in a body cast from her armpits to her knees.

Alice's husband, Edward, sat on the sofa listening as his wife talked. He's a Montreal building contractor — a substantial and affectionate man who confesed he wept when he first heard his wife's story.

In the Swedish hospital it was, ironically, a German nurse who changed Alice's life. She noticed the sick girl always selected art books from the library and introduced Alice to the Swedish sculptor Carl Hedvig who showed up at her bedside with a lump of ceramic clay.

"Create me something," the nurse said.

Alice did, moulding a crude foot which she still has today.

But the talent lay dormant through a marriage to Rudolph Blomberg shortly after she came to Canada 18 years ago, after he died and until she married Edward Winant seven years ago.

Not until five years ago, after a trip to San Francisco, did she complete her first major work, a bust of her husband.

She caught his pensiveness and the sparkle in his eyes.

She said: "The thing is I've always been inspired — even in the concentration camps.

"It seems that everything that has ever happned to me is coming out through my hands."

Apart from the Musee Rodin, she has had exhibitions across North America.

Today her work centres on love and devotion and the power of light over darkness.

"When Alice started out," her husband said, "I was apprehensive.

Chinese Art Show Opening

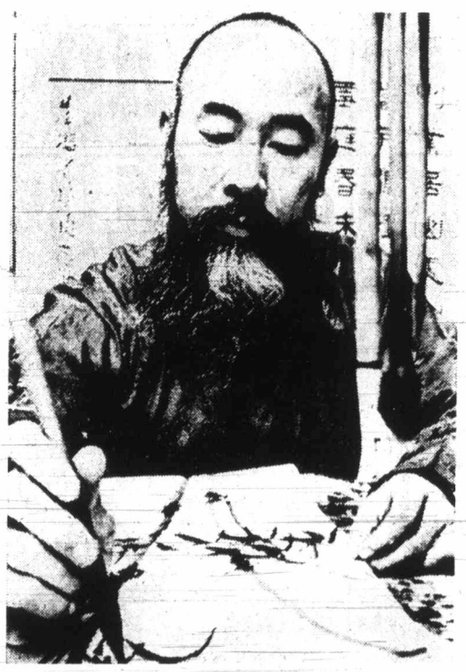

A hundred works by San Francisco artist-teacher I-chen Wu, and displays from his private collection of Chinese art dating to the 12th century, will go on show in Victoria Friday.

The exhibition at the Chinese Consolidated Benevolent Association, 636 Fisgard, will continue to Sept. 17. Hours are 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily.

The painter and calligrapher, who is also a poet, will demonstrate brush techniques each day. Lectures will be given Friday and Saturday nights from 8 to 10 in the auditorium after showing of a 500-foot color film on Chinese art. An added feature will be Wu's transcription of visitors' names into Chinese characters.

The exhibition is being presented by the Association in co-operation with the Chinese Consolidated Benevolent Association of the U.S. in San Francisco.

Wu, born in Hupeh province in central China in 1927, began sketching from nature in childhood. He was an art inspector at the Taiwan provincial department of education from 1953 to 1966 when he came to North America. This fall he is teaching Chinese painting at the University of California in San Francisco.

Doctor Charged In Tax Case

VANCOUVER (CP) — Zdenek Urbanek, 58, of Vancouver, was charged Wednesday with four counts of evading tax on income of $223,000 between Dec. 31, 1966, and May 1, 1970. Urbanek, a doctor who has not practised for four years, was arrested at Vancouver International Airport after returning from Europe.

Old Folks Gaining Power

Forces Mustering in U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's 20 million senior citizens are rallying to their own cause and fast becoming one of the most organized groups in the country.

The National Council of Senior Citizens, an AFL-CIO-backed organization, reports it has three million members in more than 3,000 affiliated clubs. Another 3.8 million are members of the National Retired Teacher Association and the American Association of Retired Persons, both predominantly white-collar groups.

Both the National Council and the AARP have doubled their membership in the last five years and the AARP said that each week 2,000 more people are paying the $2 membership fee to join.

Many state organizations also report record growth. Missouri AARP and NRTA report about 72,500 members and are adding another 1,500 each month. The Iowa State Commission on Aging reported last year it was aware of 275 senior citizen clubs; this year, 654.

In some areas organizations touch on as many as 50 per cent of the population over age 65. New York City's Congress of Senior Citizens claims a membership of 500,000 — about half the elderly in the city and a quarter of the state's two million senior citizens.

William Hutton, executive director of the 11-year-old National Council, said the recent trend toward organizing is due to the pressing needs of the steadily increasing numbers of retirees, who are living longer thanks to medical science but on fixed incomes, during a time of inflation.

At the same time, he said, there is a growing realization that though people over 65 represent only 9.8 per cent of the country's population, they are 16 per cent of those who vote and they have demonstrated that when aroused they can vote significantly as a block, despite previous party affiliations.

"It's latent power," said Hutton. "We have a slogan. It's senior power. It's just to remind people that there are 20 million people over 65 and another 20 million 55 to 65. That's 40 million people in retirement or considering retirement."

The senior citizens make their presence felt primarily through letter writing, telephone calls and telegrams but more and more, were possible, have taken to demonstrating, visiting congressmen and legislators, even grading politicians.

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Recently a divorcee who signed herself Huntington Station wrote to you and described her neighbors. They all had unsatisfactory marriages and every one of their husbands had propositioned her.

H.S. started out: "Bernice wears curlers 24 hours a day, is a chronic complainer and gets stoned every afternoon on beer. By the time her husband comes home she is staggering around the kitchen — blind."

I speak as a 47-year-old woman, married 25 years in suburbia — garden apartments, the whole bit. I know what goes on with wives everywhere because I'm the type people confide in and I hear plenty. I could put a name on every gal described in H.S.'s letter. Here's the rest of the story — from the wife's side.

Bernice wears curlers and drinks beer all afternoon because her husband is a chaser who loves to come home and brag about his conquests. He gets his jollies from letting her know every time he scores with a new broad — which is like once a week.

Marge starts cleaning the house at midnight when her husband gets ready for bed because he is a lousy lover and takes a bath once a month — whether he needs it or not.

Lenore, who says wives are fools to allow their husbands to use them as substitute call girls and considers sex degrading unless a woman is in the mood (her moods come twice a year), is married to a man who needs dirty pictures, porno films, filthy language and a fifth of Scotch to get turned on.

So the eternal question is unresolved. Which came first, the chicken or the egg?— Retching in Rochester.

New Look in Pants Is High and Wide

Colonist-Copley Service

The newest biggest pant going on for fall is high and wide.

It takes a high waistband, pleats in the front and usually ends in fat cuffs. The pants are often called bags but you aren't supposed to fill them out.

If you're short waisted, forget them. A waistband will cut you in two, something you don't need. Try hip huggers.

They are not for the woman with a bit of a tummy. Check out low-cut hip-riding pants for flattery. And wear your sweaters and T-shirts on the outside.

Who can wear them? New York models look sensational in them. So do women with fairly long legs. And people whoo look like Lauren Bacall. Very thin, downright skinny people, look terrific.

Of course, you don't have to go the entire bags route. You can get the look in straight pants that end in a cuff. Or flares that start with a natural waistband. You can avoid the baggy pleats in the front and opt for darts instead.

The fuller pants take a shorter jacket — the Eisenhower jacket, battle jacket, warm-up jacket. They take tuck-in tops too. Go slow on the layers topside if you're tucking in. A bulging waistband is not the idea.

The wrong length will kill the look. Pants should end where the shoe heel joins the shoe in back. And they shouldn't buckle or end in a heap in the front.

It's a good idea to wear a pair of platforms or clogs when you try on these pants. Don't judge the look in your bare feet. They'll look much too big. A good healthy lift from a chunky shoe is what you need.

The new pants, often credited to Fred Astaire because they look like something he could do a shuffle-tap in, are rerun of a style from the '30s. They really are men's trousers, seldom seen on anyone but eccentric professors these days.

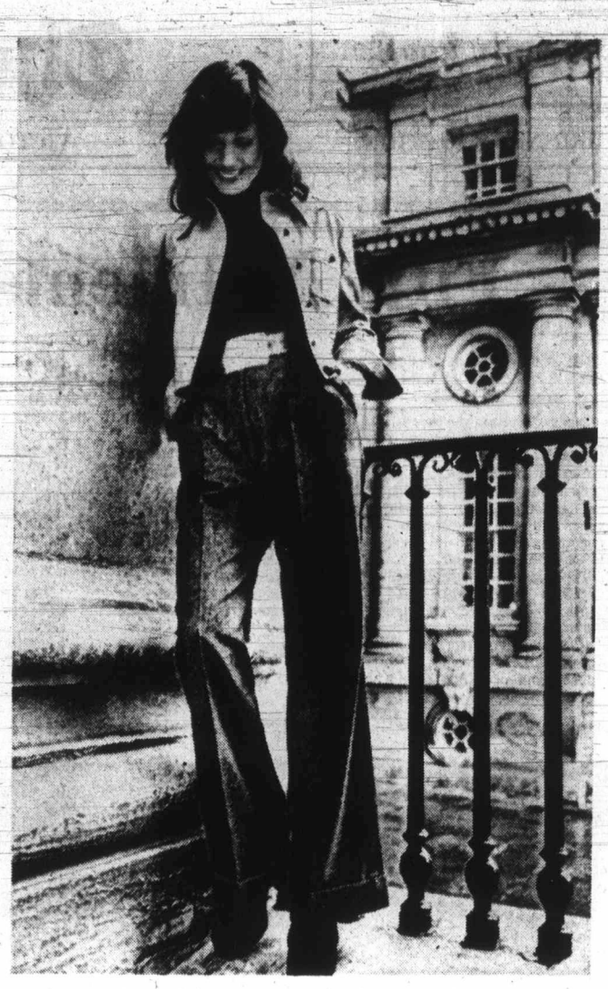

New York designers have taken to them en masse. They love them in camel, gray flannel and bold lumberjack plaids.

Bags are not, however, the only pants in town. There are straight pants on a natural waistband. Low slung hip-riders. Flared legs. And of course, all types of jeans.

The pantsuit is a mish-mash of all varieties of jackets and pants. Pants and tops are seldom in the exact matching color and pattern. The long pant top is more bathrobe wrap than tunic this time around.

Pants have proven they are not restricted to those select people under 30 and under size 12.

They can work in any woman's wardrobe. For a passing fad, pants have survived the skeptics very well. They've been passing through for a few years now and it looks like they won't pass out in the near future.

Shadow Young Taught To Swim

MONTREAL (CP) — Wendy Campbell's special program at the suburban Pointe Claire swimming pool is designed to benefit what she calls "shadow children" — children who are suffering from perceptual-motor disabilities ranging from double vision to garbled hearing. In an atmosphere free from ridicule, the children learn swimming and other basic skills which tune them in to their own body dimensions.

Abortion Clinic

Clients Act Out Roles

NEW YORK (UPI) — Item: The New York state department of health reports that 262,807 abortions were induced during 1971.

The statistic doesn't tell much about the people involved —including the woman and the men who sometimes accompany a woman to an abortion clinic.

Mrs. Ardis Danon, assistant administrator at Parkmed has been observing and talking with some of these people since that abortion centre opened more than a year ago.

She has a master's in human sexualty and family planning. She supervises the social counselling staff at the abortion facility in a skyscraper.

Men who accompany some of the unmarried women are between the ages of 18 and 25, according to Mrs. Danon. As in waiting rooms outside obstetrical delivery suites, they read aimlessly, confide to strangers, pace the floor or stare.

The women in the waiting room, by contrast, are resigned, almost relaxed. The younger women have accompanied a friend. The older women, usually mothers, seem self-conscious.

Mrs. Danon says the one element these people have in common is this: They wait for a girlfriend, wife, sister or daughter to come through the exit door — signalling that a crisis in their lives is over.

"The scene takes place daily," Mrs. Danon said. "Only the characters change."

She feels the men who are waiting are more anxious. "They seem to be aware, perhaps for the first time, that the girlfriend is there because it was a joint, not a unilateral, happening," she said. "They feel responsibility, even guilt."

Husbands usually are worried about one thing. "Will my wife be okay?" No remorse is seen or expressed, according to Mrs. Danon. Abortion is these cases seems to have been agreed upon because the couple has enough children or because of a health or financial problem.

Mrs. Danon has observed that sometimes married women, particularly those over 35, have no one waiting. She believes this may be because the husband is babysitting with the other children. Or — she may be separated. Or — she may not want husband to know what she is doing.

Mothers generally accompany their 16-year-old or younger daughters. Here, according to Mrs. Danon, the concern is twofold: apparently to preserve their own image and to protect their daughter's reputation.

"One problem that these mothers have is that they were brought up when the Puritan ethic held," Mrs. Danon said.

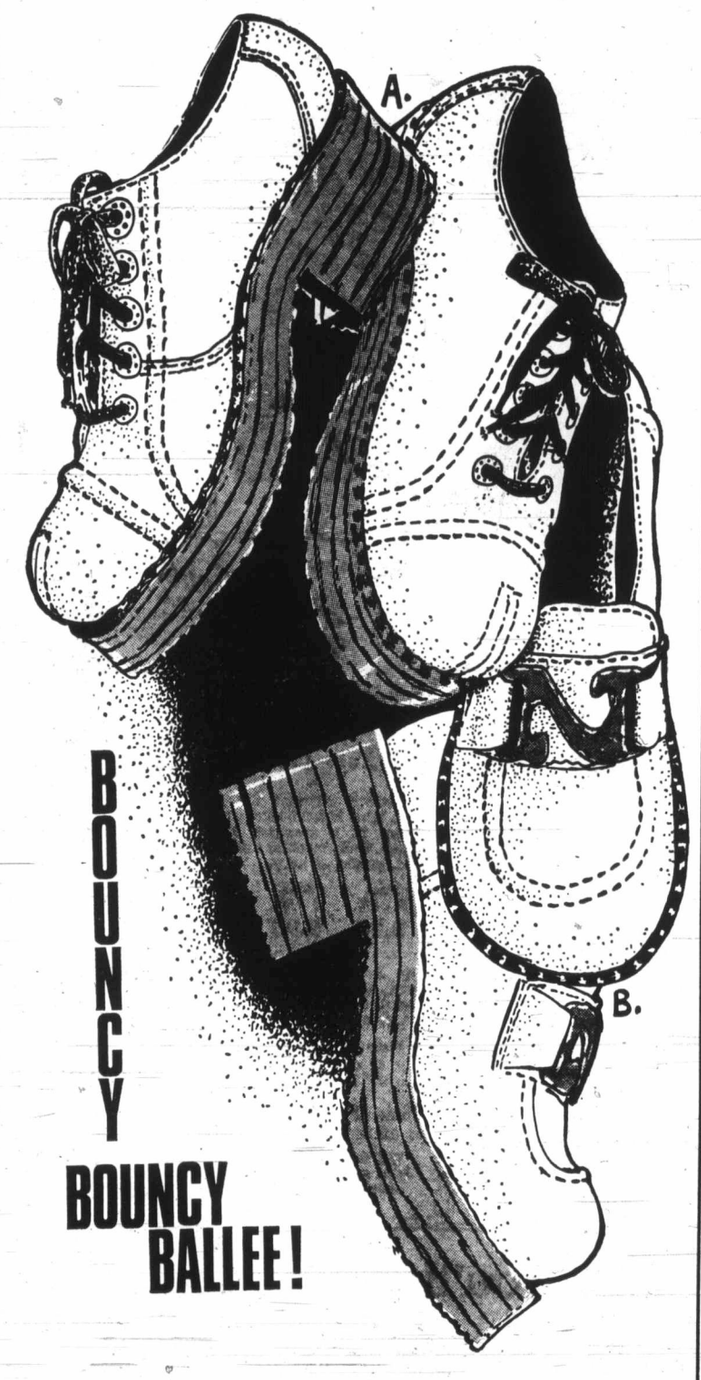

Do all unmarried teena-gers tell their mothers? In response to this queston, Mrs. Danon said:

"They may disagree with their mothers' old-fashioned views, but when pregnancy becomes a reality because they've done their own thing, the most mature teenagers prefer to make their own arrangement.

Wide Neckties Delayed

Fashion Neglects Russian Male

Colonist-Los Angeles Times

MOSCOW — Consider the case of the much-maligned Russian male. The fashion parade has passed him by.

Over the last few years, he has seen his women, following a mysterious communications network, adopt some of the basic fashion styles of the west.

The women have hiked up their skirts over their knees and donned pantsuits. In place of the heavy, practical furlined boots they traditionally wore in winter, they have put on colorful plastic models. They now wear a dash of eye shadow.

Using their sewing talents, the women have copied styles they see on foreign tourists, clothing worn in foreign movies and patterns from contraband western magazines that pass from hand-to-hand.

They even have a counter-trend going: they wear see-through blouses to show off the improved bras that have become available in recent years while their counterparts in the west dispense with theirs.

While all this feminine fashion activity was going on, Russian men stood impatiently in line for one little item of fashion — the wide neckties they were promised three years ago.

"It seems that to make enough neckties or beautiful sports shirts is much more difficult than to make a dam across the Yenisey River or a factory or to build apartment houses for 100,000 people," one Soviet authority observed.

Russian men's clothing has little style. While trousers with flair are fashionable in most parts of the world, Russian trousers, even those in the best stores, resemble the old peg-leg style.

But the failure of the government to deliver a single, small item — the wide cravat — is one of the many unsolved mysteries about the centrally planned Soviet economy.

Government and Communist party officials deliberately discourage factories from making goods to satisfy many of the demands of young people who display fascination for western pop culture from blue jeans and fatigue jackets to hard rock music.

To Soviet officialdom, such carvings are examples of delinquency. The music and casual clothing itself are categorized under the general heading of bourgeois, outside influences. There is also no reliable way for the Soviet economy to reflect true buyer wants in advance.

Wide ties cleared all the official hurdles and were scheduled for production three years ago.

They are so acceptable that the official government newspaper Izvestia has joined in the investigation of why they have not appeared.

"Trying to find a reason for the necktie shortage, we visited the ministries of light industry for the Soviet Union and for the Russian republic, but we could not discover anybody there who could be considered guilty for the delay in production," an Izvestia correspondent said.

After waiting in line over a two-day period at a special tie store, Ustin Malapagin, a satirical writer, asked the manager: "Give me a fashionable necktie. The girls have stopped loving me."

"We have neither fashionable nor narrow outdated neckties," the manager answered.

Along Gorky Street, the one Muscovites call their Fifth Avenue, one of the many state stores named Russland had only four, nearly identical, narrow blue ties on display at 1.35 or 1.45 rubles.

There were plenty of white shirts at 6.30 to 9.98 rubles and fancy French-cuffed shirts at 18 rubles. There were also plain sport shirts for 10.50 to 15.60 rubles.

In the suit department there were the usual drab blues, grays and browns Russian men wear at 77 to 84 rubles. A sporty royal blue number with a belt in front was shown at 99 rubles and a dress black suit was 127 rubles.

Based on the official value of $1.22 to one ruble, the prices were comparable to a better line of men's clothing in the United States.

On the Russian scale of value, however, the prices were high. The average wage in the Soviet Union is now 128.5 rubles a month, meaning that the lowest-priced suit in the Russland store cost more than two weeks' pay and a white shirt was more than a days pay.

By European and American standards, the quality of the merchandise was very poor.

Erma Bombeck

Someone asked my husband at a party the other night to what he attributed his long marriage and he said "It's a happy mating of a man and a hamsttr. I work all day while she sleeps and I sleep at night while she runs around her exercise wheel."

I thought that was a pretty rotten thing to say considering the fact that I must assume all the worry and the anxiety of raising a family and running a home when there aren't enough daylight hours.

Once I am in bed I must worry if the front door is locked, if the coffee pot is unplugged, the guard rails up on the bunk beds, the car lights out, the bread is out of the freezer to defrost for breakfast, the check in the milkbox for the milkman and if the toilet will stop running. Frankly, I don't know how men can be so insensitive to what is going on.

Last week I shook my husband and whispered, "What's that?"

"What's what?"

"That barking."

"It's just a wild guess, but it could be the dog."

"I know it is the dog, but what is he barking at?"

"Maybe the furnace blower went on again."

"You don't care about anything, do you?"

"Like what?"

"Like in all the years we've been married, never once have you gone around to the childrens' beds and checked to see if they were breathing all right."

"Oh, good grief. Why do you insist on lying thert all night with your eyes open?"

"Because that is when I do my best thinking. Last night I think I figured out where Howard Hughes is. Tonight, I am trying to figure out how to stay on the Stillman diet without a nose plug. Tomorrow, who knows? I may find a cure for ground hamburger."

"Where are you going?"

"To see why the dog is barking."

At dawn I crawled into bed. My husband stirred. "What was the dog barking about?"

"Someone had put gym shoes on the register to dry. I knew he was barking at something."

"You've been down there all that time blowing on a pair on gym shoes?" he asked.

"No, I decided to do the froning. Did you really mean that crack about our marriage?"

"No," he yawned, "You've given me 14 wonderful years."

"We've been married 21 years," I corrected.

"So . . . 14 out of 21 isn't bad," he sighed.

MOTHERS OF SMALL FRY . . . will be happy to hear about a gentle, soothing laxative for pre-schoolers . . . BABY'S OWN TABLETS. For over 60 years Mothers have found Baby's Own Tablets helpful when baby was teething or had an upset tummy. But did you know that Baby's Own Tablets have a gentle way of relieving tummy upsets in children from 6 months to three years old? You see, the mild laxative in Baby's Own Tablets works quickly to relieve irregularity due to minor tummy troubles — while it soothes the pain. And because they taste so good they're easy to give. Ask your Doctor about Baby's Own Tablets.

Baby's Own Tablets

LIKE SO MANY PEOPLE . . . I always make sure I have DR. FOWLER'S EXTRACT OF WILD STRAWBERRY on my shelf. Then, if one of my family suddenly develops the nausea, cramps and weakness of diarrhea, Dr. Fowler's is right there to bring gentle, soothing relief. Formulated from roots and herbs, it quickly relieves embarrassing symptoms and restores intestinal balance. No one is immune . . . we all tend to over-indulge at times . . . even a change in climate or water can be the culprit. Whatever. Dr. Fowler's has helped over 6 generations of Canadian adults and children . . . the best recommendation I can think of!

Oomphies Whites

Oomphies Working Whites are different two ways; first, they're the only whites you can buy with Oomphies cushion of comfort. A thick layer of foam between you and the hard, hard world. So Oomphies are more comfortable, hour after hour, day after day. Second, Oomphies don't look like ordinary white working shoes. They've got the same fashion-flair excitement you look for in Oomphies dress shoes. Look into Oomphies at one of the fine stores listed below.

BUTCHART GARDENS—Known the world over for its incredible beauty . . . romantic night lighting . . . spectacular Ross Fountains . . . Entertainment . . . Floral Restaurant . . . Begonia Bower . . . Show Greenhouse . . . fascinating seed and gift shop. Open every day 9 a.m. to 11 p.m.

BUTCHART GARDENS — New and excitingly different week after week, season after season. Dedicated gardeners, skilful planning, constant replanting keeps them that way. Developed from an old abandoned limestone quarry over half a century ago they have grown to become one of the world's most unusual, written about, talked about, admired gardens. Embracing over 30 acres, actually six gardens in one — fabulous Sunken, spectacular Ross Fountain Garden, stately Italian, quaint Japanese, Stage Show Garden and the English Rose Garden!

BUTCHART GARDENS ROMANTIC NIGHT LIGHTING— As darkness takes over, a thousand hidden lights combine with the moon and stars, the hills, trees and shrubs, lakes, lily ponds and fountains, to create a fairyland, softly scented by the flowers — a spectacle so unusual, so grand, it's indescribable! Featuring the Sunken Garden and the spectacular Ross Fountains in their majestic "Ballet to the Stars."

BUTCHART GARDENS FLORAL RESTAURANT — Open every day 11 a.m. to 7:30 p.m., serving delicious lunches, afternoon teas, and delightful suppers in the evening. Continuous snack and coffee bar service.

BUTCHART GARDENS ENTERTAINMENT — The Butchart Gardeners 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. Mon. through Fri. inclusive . . . The Butchart Buskers 1 to 3 p.m. Sat. and Sun. Color film "Helicopter Canada" or "Mountains to the Sea" every evening at dusk.

BUTCHART GARDENS SUGGESTS: Combine it all into one grand, thrifty outing . . . the gardens by daylight . . . romantic night lighting and the Ross Fountains in their majestic "Ballet to the Stars". The regular admission covers it all. To add to your pleasure, dine in the Butchart Gardens Floral Restaurant.

Off Stage, Bastion's Problems Knotty

By ERITH SMITH
Colonist Reporter

When a theatre company announces its program of plays for the coming season there is scant public knowledge or appreciation of the problems encountered in setting up the program.

One factor for example:

Edwin Stephenson has just returned to Victoria to direct Bastion Theatre's plays for winter and spring. One play he hopes to offer in March is the English comedy, How the Other Half Loves.

This play, now enjoying an extended run in London's West End starring Robert Morley, will later go on tour to New York, Toronto and other U.S. centres.

While in London this summer, Stephenson went to the head office of Samuel French Ltd. to seek the performing rights.

"Bastion Theatre," Stephenson reminded them, "is in Victoria — 3,000 miles from New York and almost as far from Toronto."

It didn't seem to make much difference. Sale of the rights to New York apparently included all of North America, and the vast distances and lack of overlap didn't seem to register.

However, Stephenson is still negotiating, and still hoping.

The young director has had a busy year. Immediately at the close of the last season here, in mid-March, he left for New Brunswick to direct Fredericton Playhouse's Philadelphia, Here I Come, in which Victoria's Ramona McBean had a featured role.

Then it was back to Toronto to audition for the Fredericton three-month summer season — three plays in three months.

In between, Stephenson sandwiched his "holidays" — three weeks in London during which he saw 23 plays.

In Victoria he's already hard at work helping in the sale of season tickets for Bastion's shows. This type of sale, he says, doubled attendance this summer at the Fredericton performances.

Opening Nov. 17 at the McPherson Playhouse will be You Know I Can't Hear You When the Water's Running.

Tom Kneebone, well-known Canadian theatrical and television actor, is coming to take the lead in Where's Charley? — the hilarious musical version of Charley's Aunt, opening Dec. 26.

A Canadian comedy, Maybe We Can Get Some Bach, directed by Peter Mannering and with a cast of about 24, will open Jan. 19 in Bastion's Studio Theatre.

To keep the laughter rolling, George Bernard Shaw's "women's lib" comedy, Mrs. Warren's Profession, will open Feb. 16.

Final play, set for March 9, will hopefully be the one Stephenson is negotiating for in London. Failing that, he's considering one of Noel Coward's brittle comedian for the season closer.

Bastion Plans Auditions

Two sets of auditions for Bastion Theatre enterprises will take place this month.

Colin Gorrie, artistic director of Bastion Studio Company and Theatre School, will audition and hold interviews for the Studio Company Monday and Tuesday, Sept. 11 and 12, from 1 to 3 p.m. and 7 to 9 p.m. at the studio theatre, 538 Yates.

Auditions for Edwin Stephenson's mainstage season will take place Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 23 and 24, from 7 to 11 p.m. in the old courtroom in the Maritime Museum Building, Bastion Square.

Those auditioning may, if they wish, bring their own material or music.

New Brunswick Plane Crash

Legislators Cheat Death

GRAND HARBOR, N.B. (CP) — Three members of the New Brunswick legislature escaped death Tuesday afternoon when a small aircraft in which they were travelling crashed on Grand Manan Island in the Bay of Fundy.

Leland McGaw, Progressive Conservative member for Charlotte, was reported in fair condition in hospital at St. Stephen, N.B., while Decosta Young, the other PC member in Charlotte, was admitted to the Saint John General Hospital. He is also reported in fair condition.

Education Minister Lorne McGuigan escaped injury.

The pilot of the chartered aircraft, identified as Edward Thearyon, was not injured. The plane, owned by Airacadia of Fredericton, was demolished.

An RCMP spokesman said the accident occurred about 4:35 p.m. near the Grand Manan municipal airport. The aircraft was leaving for the mainland when it plummeted to the ground about 300 feet from the end of the runway.

The four occupants apparently escaped through a broken window. They were picked up by a car and taken to the 14-bed Grand Manan Hospital.

McGaw is believed to have suffered internal injuries.

McGaw and Young were transferred to separate hospitals by ambulance Wednesday morning.

Investigators from the ministry of transport were on the scene Wednesday.

Miners Break Away

WHITEHORSE, Y.T. (CP) — About 230 mine workers employed by Cassiar Asbestos at its Clinton Creek operation have broken away from the United Steelworkers of America union and are considering establishing their own union.

Paul Mitchell, former president of what was Steelworker Local 564, said Wednesday the workers would try to reclaim $4,000 in back dues paid to the international union in July and August.

"The money is dues paid out for representation and we received none," Mitchell said.

Paul Formby, former vice-president of the local, said the group "would like to establish a Canadian mine workers union."

"We have taken steps to draw up a constitution and the membership was behind our intentions," he said.

Mitchell said the group has received inquiries from other steelworker unions at four other mines in the Yukon.

Law Reform Chief:

'Clarify Role Of Judiciary'

HAMILTON, Ont. (CP) — The head of the federal Law Reform Commission says there is "an urgent need to clarify the role to be played constitutionally by the judiciary and the courts in this country."

Mr. Justice Patrick Hartt said there exists a serious question as to jurisdiction of the courts in criminal matters and their powers to preserve the integrity of their own process.

He told about 200 members of the judiciary, lawyers, administrative and court officials at a ceremony Tuesday marking the opening of the fall assizes of the Supreme Court of Canada, that historically the role of the courts was that of principal guardian of the rights of the individual.

"If this is not in fact the role the courts play in our society, this should be clarified in order that the responsibility may be properly placed where in fact it does exist," Hartt said.

If, on the other hand, this was the proper responsibility of the courts, then they must unequivocally be given the authority which would allow them to carry out their role.

Hartt suggested the role of judges in future should be to assume increasing responsibility for the protection of groups and individuals in our society.

He said the six-man commission he heads is trying to resolve what is best for Canada by eliminating obsolete laws, removing anachronisms and anomalies in the law and developing new approaches to the law to meet the needs of modern society.

Hartt, an Ontario Supreme Court judge on a five-year leave of absence since his appointment to the commission in April, 1971, said law reform is not simply a matter for lawyers, and called for citizens and community groups to get involved in the law-reform process.

□

TAMPA, Fla. — The Florida doctor who founded the right-wing Let Freedom Ring telephone service was sentenced to one year in prison for failure to pay federal income tax since 1957. Dr. William Campbell Douglass, 42, was ordered to spend 120 days in jail with the rest of the sentence suspended. The Let Freedom Ring service gave a recorded right-wing political speech to anyone who dialled the special telephone.

□

EAST MEADOW, N.Y. — The county sheriff, saying he feared an assassination attempt, ordered federal authorities to remove reputed heroin overlord Auguste Joseph Ricord from the local jail. "This man is reputedly the head of a multi-million-dollar drug smuggling ring and a former Nazi collaborator," Nassau County Sheriff Michael Seniuk said. "He's a prime target for a rubout, and I don't want him in our jail."

□

CALGARY — Five southern Alberta chiefs want Harold Cardinal to resign as president of the Indian Association of Alberta because of "lack of confidence" in the leader, first elected to the position in 1968. Telegrams demanding his resignation were sent to the association headquarters in Edmonton and to the Indian affairs and secretary of state departments in Ottawa, both of which provide the IAA with funds. They were signed by chiefs of the Blackfoot, Blood, Peigan, Sarcee and Stony Tribes.

□

PERTH, Australia — About 200 students mobbed the car of South African Ambassador J. D. Mills when he attempted to pay an official visit to the University of Western Australia in Perth. They hurled stones and tomatoes, dented the car's roof and door panels and chanted "racist pig." Mills, who was to address students at the university, did not get past the gate.

Calgary Policeman Hails Canadian Citizenship Rule

CALGARY (CP) — An Alberta government decision to change regulations in the Police Act regarding the citizenship of police chiefs was greeted with enthusiasm Wednesday from the president of the Calgary Police Association.

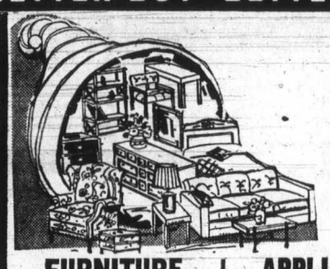

Sgt. Philip Crosby-Jones said it clarifies once and for all the terms of reference which the city police commission must follow in appointing Calgary's new chief.

The change in the Police Act, approved by the cabinet in an order-in-council, says towns and cities in Alberta with a population of 5,000 or more persons may not appoint a chief unless he is a Canadian citizen.

Crosby-Jones said the decision represents "a universal rule followed all over the world in respect to police chiefs."

The cabinet agreed to a request from Calgary city council asking that Canadian citizenship be required as a qualification following an abortive attempt to hire Chief Charles Gain of Oakland, Calif., last month.

Black September

Secret Terrorist Arm?

From UPI

Some observers believe that Black September, the Arab guerrilla organization which claimed responsibility for the atttack on Israel's Olympic team, is the secret terrorist arm of the outwardly more moderate Al Fatah Arab guerrillas.

In Arab capitals, the action in Munich, which resulted in the death of 11 Israelis, five guerrillas and one West German policeman Tuesday, was seen as retaliation for the thwarting of an airplane hijacking and killing of two guerrillas in Israel last May.

Formed in 1970 by about 200 young members of Al Fatah, the terrorist group takes its name from the supression of Palestinian guerrillas in Jordan by King Hussein in September, 1970.

In a background memorandum on the group issued following the Munich attack, the American Jewish Committee quoted reports that Black September "is the clandestine terroristic branch of Fatah.

"Fatah itself," the memorandum said, "seeks to project an image of moderation while leaving the acts of terror and sabotage to the Black September organization."

Similar reports have come from sources in Arab countries.

The first action for which the organization claimed credit was the assassination last Nov. 28 of Jordanian Premier Wasfi Tal in Cairo as he returned to his hotel from a meeting of the Arab League joint defence council.

On Dec. 15, Black September laid public claim to an unsuccessful assassination attempt in London on Jordan's ambassador to Britain, Zaid al Rifi.

Four members of Black September seized a Belgian Sabena Boeing 707 with 100 persons aboard on the ground at Lod international airport near Tel Aviv and demanded the release of 106 known Arab guerrillas held by the Israelis.

Israeli troops dressed as airline service employees stormed the plane, however, killed two male hijackers and captured the two women assisting them. Black September vowed vengeance.

The machine-gun attack on Lod airport which killed 28 persons and wounded 72 later came later in May, but the three Japanese who carried it out acted for the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, a Marxist group.

Two Killed, Two Injured

SPENCES BRIDGE (CP) — Two persons were killed and two were in hospital following a head-on collision on the Trans-Canada Highway about eight miles north of this Fraser Canyon community. Names of the dead and injurred were not released but police said one car was from Alberta and the other from California.

View from Guerrillas

CAIRO (UPI) — A Palestinian guerrilla radio station Wednesday night accused Munich police of "brutality and . . . thirst for Palestinian blood" and said West German interests will become a "principal target" for future Palestinian action.

The voice of the Palestinian Revolution eulogized the guerrillas who launched the Munich attack as "heroes . . (and) martyrs, who sacrificed their lives for the sake of their principles."

The radio, which broadcasts from Cairo, denounced the trap set for the guerrillas by West German police marksmen and said the guerrillas had to shoot in self-defence.

"The humane character of the Palestinian commandos was revealed in the fact that they extended the deadline for sparing the lives of the hostages several times," the radio said.

"But the brutality of Munich police and their thirst for Palestinian blood made themselves evident in the ugliest forms of treachery and betrayal, and the Palestinians, who faced a massacre, had to defend themselves," the broadcast added.

The radio said the "commandos were very clear when they told West German authorities that any attempt to foil the operation would mean the death of the hostages, and the West German government would be fully responsible."

"Its interests will also be a principal target for them in the future," the radio said.

Lower Fraser River Is Relatively Clean

VANCOUVER (CP) — Compared to other industrialized rivers in North America and Europe, the lower Fraser River in British Columbia is relatively unpolluted, Dr. Irving Fox, director of a UBC research project on the river, said Wednesday.

He said preliminary indications of research on the 100 miles of the river from Hope to Vancouver are that the river "appears pretty clean."

The professor of regional and community planning also said it will take two years to measure the quality of water in the lower Fraser and project the data into the future and to complete research in other, related areas.

He wouldn't say what the preliminary findings were, but said that some pollution had entered the Fraser via tributary streams.

He said it shouldn't be assumed that industry is the major polluter.

"In fact, homes, forestry operations and agriculture use materials which can have pretty serious effects when they get into the water system."

After physical, biological and social science studies — including efforts to find out what the public wants and how much it would cost to achieve desired levels of water quality — the research team plans to issue full reports, Fox said.

The study group includes a law professor and students who will help design proposals for alternative laws on water quality if research results indicate they are needed.

He said the centre may also suggest alternatives to present admihistrative and fiscal arrangements for regulating the lower Fraser.

Fox said that if research turns up a serious pollution hazard, the group would notify responsible authorities and release the finding to the public.

He estimated that the centre will spend between $400,000 and $500,000 on the entire project. It is funded by the federal environment department.

The research group has offered places on an advisory panel to 20 groups, including governments, Indians, industry and conservation organizations. Fox said 13 of the groups who have responded to the invitation have expressed interest in being consulted.

The lower Fraser project is the first for the water resources centre at UBC, which was founded last summer to bring together specialists in the social and physical sciences.

UBC provides office space and allows academics to take time off from regular duties to work on its projects.

Bureaucracy His Foe

Island Sculptor Tilts Windmill In Massive Style

By BILL THOMAS
Colonist Reporter

Salt Spring Island sculptor Josef Caveno is a man with a dual missio — to create massive metal sculptures and to fight what he calls "the bureaucratic circle of corpulently conscientious administrators."

Caveno who was born in Sicily has a show at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria that runs to Sept. 24 in which he illustrates what are, in effect, scale models for giant-sized outdoor metal or metal-and-wood sculptures.

He is showing two models of kinetic sculptures which he would like to see built in Vancouver. The works are set on three legs and a towering wood spar is counterbalanced on a ball weighted with a large boulder.

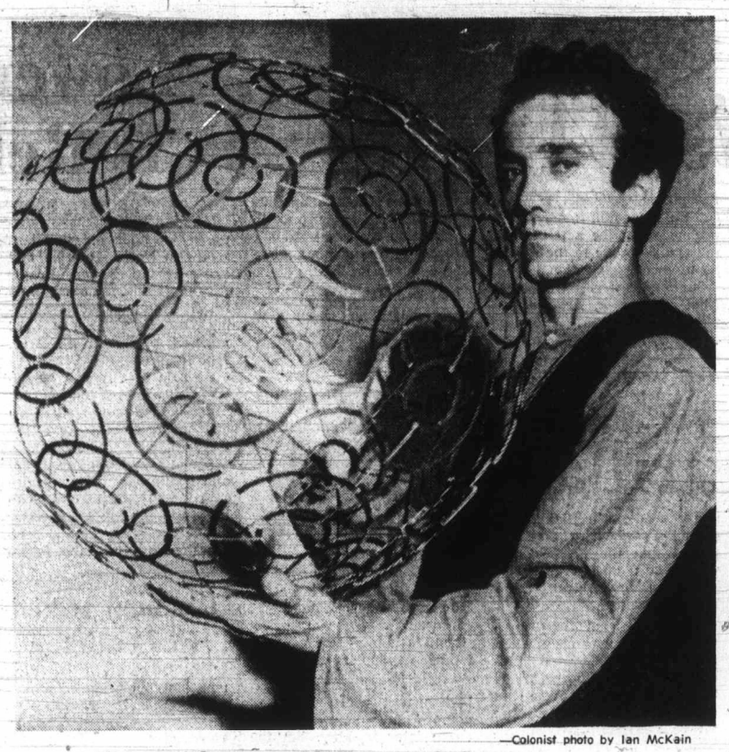

In the show the "boulder" is a rounded pebble. If the work were built full size it would weigh tons.

The ball of steel is a spheric spring with a series of flat circular connected fastened with straight connectors. None of the components is welded or in any way permanently attached but the entire work is stabilized by "a network of circular and rectilinear tensions and compressions in a state of equilibrium."

Caveno said Wednesday that even if his works were built on a large scale they would present no construction problems.

"Fabrication of this sphere is possible," he explained, "without any additional hardware other than the components themselves. A tool such as a block and tackle may be necessary to flex components into place when working in large scale."

Caveno with Tension Sphere

Engineers have said the work of Caveno "could easily revolutionize all our existing applications of the geodesic dome as developed by Buckminster Fuller."

The major problem facing Caveno is administrative rather than artistic for he has so far been unable to convince civic administrators that he be allowed to build his works and put them up in public areas.

He has a sponsor for a full-sized tension sphere in Vancouver industrialist Cam Wilkinson of Wilkinson Steel Co. who has offered to put up the money for a 25-foot-diameter version as a gift to the city of Vancouver.

Caveno, who studied at the Vancouver School of Art, is unhappy about civic reaction to the offer saying this "project is also being painfully delayed by a mysteriously tenacious lack of imagination."

Air Fare Chop Warms Elderly

Two spokesmen for old age pensioners welcomed an announcement Wednesday by Canadian Pacific Airlines of an increased discount on standby fares for senior citizens.

A discount of 40 per cent, subject to government approval, will be offered effective Oct. 1 on flights in Canada, the announcement said.

The new fare proposal is an amendment of a previously outlined plan for citizens over 65 years of age to receive a discount of 25 per cent with confirmed space and a one-third discount on a standby basis.

"It's wonderful news," said William Booth, president of Sidney Old Age Pensioners. "I'll announce it at our next meeting and there'll be a lot of people glad to hear it."

Booth said he was planning a trip to Saskatoon Oct. 1 to visit relatives and he found the announcement "real good news."

Stanley Uren, president of Pensioners Concerned of Canada, Greater Victoria branch, said he was glad that, at last, senior citizens are being recognized "and more things are coming out way."

"It will make it much easier for us to get around," he added. "I just hope they'll keep up the good work in other directions."

An Air Canada spokesman said youth and old age pensioners now were entitled to a one-third discount on standby.

An application is in to give senior citizens 25 per cent off fares with confirmed space and to give youth 40 per cent off on a standby basis and to eliminate standby for those over 65.

Ambulance Brief Hits Shelf

A 13-page brief on the standard of ambulance service in Greater Victoria was presented Wednesday to the Capital Regional Board's committee of the whole.

The brief, prepared by an ambulance ad-hoc committee under the chairmanship of a former ambulance driver, went the way of all briefs — it was received and filed.

There was little debate on the brief which criticized ambulance service in Greater Victoria is lacking a high standard with the exception of three municipally owned vehicles.

Only Mayor Archibald Galbraith of Central Saanich objected to a number of items contained in the brief.

He said that, contrary to the brief's statements, an ambulance could reach any part of his municipality within four minutes.

He also said that the training of drivers was not substandard as suggested by the brief.

"Sure, we would all like doctors to drive our ambulances, but that's hardly possible," Galbraith said.

The brief, prepared in the main by L. B. Klein, former employee of a privately owned ambulance service, said the only outstanding ambulance service in the area was rendered by the Saanich fire department.

Its vehicles were outfitted with sophisticated equipment enabling the well-trained staff to treat victims of heart attacks on the scene.

"It has resusciated to date at least three clinically dead people, something that couldn't have been done using ordinary ambulance equipment," the report said.

But even that service, it added, was plagued by problems. Its men must serve as firefighters as well as ambulance attendants. In case of a major fire in Saanich, the ambulance might be staffed by people with less than first-aid training.

Two other services. those operated by Oak Bay and Esquimalt, the brief said, were modern and well-equipped, but by no means outstanding.

Four volunteer services operating in Langford, Sooke, Sidney and Central Saanich, couldn't possibly render first-class service because they must cover too much territory and because their personnel aren't properly trained.

The problem with the area's only privately operated ambulance service, according to the brief, was that provision of excellent service was in conflict with the firm's wish to earn money.

On a more general basis, the brief outlined problems peculiar to all ambulance services in Greater Victoria.

The lack of communication between services, the lack of provincial standards, the lack of standardization of vehicles, equipment and supplies, and, quite often, the lack of sanitary precautions by attendants — all these things resulted in a basically inferior ambulance service, the brief said.

It recommended that the provincial government take immediate steps to ensure a higher standard of ambulance service throughout the province.

The Capital Regional Board should undertake a feasibility study on whether or not a regional service may be possible, it said.

Better training for ambulance attendants, the brief recommended, should begin as soon as possible.

Boy Dies In Blast

WILLIAMS LAKE (CP) — Cody Lee, 14, of Williams Lake, was killed in a dynamite explosion at a ranch about 50 miles west of here. Police said the boy was apparently trying to dynamite a beaver dam when caught by a delayed explosion.

Police Kill One, Blind One

Tear Gas Hits Santiago

SANTIAGO, Chile (UPI) — An exploding tear gas shell killed a teenager and another blinded an adult Wednesday in the fourth series of bloody clashes in downtown Santiago in less than three weeks.

The government said more than 170 persons had been arrested in the disturbances that began at midday and raged through the evening on the capital's main shopping thoroughfare.

Police said Mario Aviles Oyarce, 17, a high school dropout, was hit in the face by a bursting tear gas shell.

Another exploding shell smashed into the forehead of Pedro Araya, an accountant, who was watching the disturbances from the terrace of his ninth-floor apartment. Police said Araya had been blinded and was in critical condition.

The incidents occurred during fighting between riot police and striking anti-government high school students, who were parading without a municipal permit.

The students hurled rocks and bottles at police and set newspapers afire in the centre of the street. Police fired random volleys of tear gas. Several shells landed among clusters of people who were waiting for buses.

A police water-launcher barreled down the street, drenching demonstrators and spraying spectators who were watching the action from apartment and office building windows.

At nightfall, police detoured all traffic from the street.

Several students were arrested. Shoppers, covering their noses with handkerchiefs, fled into stores and office buildings while clouds of tear gas swirled over the three-block area.

At the height of the disturbance, former president Eduardo Frei emerged from an office building a few paces from the action and was enthusiastically applauded as he was driven away.

The students involved in the clashes represented private schools, whose leaders are opposed to socialist President Salvadore Allende. Christian Democrat Frei was Allende's predecessor.

More than 600 persons have been arrested in downtown Santiago in violent incidents since Aug. 21, when merchants closed their stores in a 24-hour protest strike.

Low Profits Decried By Alberta's Dairies

EDMONTON (CP) — The lowest milk prices of any major city in Canada are to be found in Edmonton and Calgary, the Public Utilities Board of Alberta was told Wednesday.

Ralph Sutton of Calgary, western region manager for Silverwood Dairies Ltd., told the board the province as a whole generally has the lowest prices in the country for milk products.

The board is conducting hearings on applications by Alberta's dairies and milk producers for an increase in the price of fluid milk.

The last price increase, a cent a quart, was in September, 1971. It brought prices in the province to 31 cents a quart for homogenized milk, 29 cents for milk with a 2 percent butterfat content and 24 cents for skim milk.

Sutton, who said he was speaking for Edmonton three major dairies — Silverwood, Palm Dairies Ltd. and Northern Alberta Dairy Pool Ltd. — said he had no doubt Edmonton has the lowest price for home-delivery of "2-per-cent" milk.

The board was told earlier by chartered accountant William Astle that the three dairies' profit on fluid milk sales could be almost eliminated in 1973 at present prices.

In 1971, the board was told, the dairies' average net income on a price of 31.86 cents a quart — the average of all types of milk and cream — was 56/100 of a cent after taxes or 1.75 per cent of sales.

The estimated comparable figures for this year were 36/100 or a cent of 1.09 per cent.

Astle said costs will be up by about 6 per cent this year over 1971. Labor costs, a major component of the overall costs, would be higher because of a contract which went into effect May 1, giving dairy employees a 12-per-cent wage increase and a further 7 per cent next May.

Royal Trust Buys Bank

MONTREAL (UPI) — The Royal Trust Company announced Monday it has acquired, through a merger, the International Bank of Miami, Florida.

The Royal Trust announcement said the merger became effective Sept. 2 and 316,028 Royal Trust shares involved in the transaction will be issued to the shareholders of the International Bank. Certificates representing 231,033 shares have already been issued to certain principal shareholders.

Royal Trust said there would be no change in the present officers and employees of the acquired bank.

Barrett Chats, But . . .

No Light Shed on Timing

Premier-elect Dave Barrett dropped in to the offices he occupied as leader of the opposition here Wednesday but cast little new light on the timetable of the coming change in provincial governments.

Barrett talked with reporters but would only repeat his earlier statements that it was up to Bennett to decide when the transfer of power should take place.

Bennett said earlier another cabinet meeting is scheduled Friday but his resignation isn't expected until early next week.

Shortly after Bennett officially steps down, Barrett will be formally called upon by Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson to be sworn in as the new premier and either then or some time within a few days the new cabinet members would also take their oaths of office.

The NDP leader said Wednesday he has made up his mind about some cabinet appointments, but is still undecided about others and wouldn't give any indication as to who he might choose or when they would be sworn in. However, the first caucus of NDP members elected last week will be held here Sept. 16 and this could be an appropriate occasion.

It is Bennett's prerogative, Barrett said, to take whatever time he wishes to clear up routine business in government. Barrett added he was sure, in the interim, "no major decisions would be made by the Social Credit government . . ."

As soon as the changeover has been completed, he added, the names of new ministers would be made public together with a statement of their "duties and goals, both long and short term."

Barrett said he had no plans to contact Bennett on this visit to Victoria. He spent some time dealing with routine business in his office and answering correspondence which had piled up since the NDP's upset victory at the polls Aug. 30.

Barrett
. . . Bennett's time

Meanwhile, Bennett, who celebrated his 72nd birthday Wednesday, spent the day in his office doing business as usual and reading messages from well wishers.

TV Talk Site Here?

A request by Victoria Cablevision Ltd. for a rate increase of 50 cents per subscriber shouldn't be dealt with at the Oct. 3 meeting of the Canadian Radio and TV Commission in Edmonton, according to David Groos, Liberal MP for Victoria-Oak Bay.

In a telegram to the CRTC, Groos said hearings on the request should be held in Victoria or Vancouver.

The application for a monthly increase from $4.50 to $5 is on the agenda of the CRTC's meeting in Edmonton.

Groos said in his telegram that there was no urgency to decide the matter so soon.

Failing a positive response from the CRTC, Groos said he is prepared to present his case in person to the CRTC in Edmonton.

Enumerators Needed

Victoria's federal returning officer has a problem.

Despite an appeal issued last week for enumerators to list eligible voters for the Oct. 30 election, he was still well short Wednesday of the enumerators he requires.

Wilson said he needs about 250 enumerators before next Monday — and if he doesn't get them, he doesn't know how it will be possible to make up a voters' list.

The only way a voter can get on the list is to be listed by official enumerators calling on homes.

"I don't think the Elections Act has envisaged a lack of enumerators. There's no course for us to follow," said Wilson.

In Victoria there is need for a total of 524 enumerators — two for each polling division, and with the nominations from last election's candidates on hand it looks as if about half that number are available.

Things are going a little better in the Esquimalt-Saanich riding, according to returning officer Mrs. E. T. Lea, but there is need there for more help, too.

There are 264 polls in that riding, and 229 of them need two enumerators. She has already nominated enumerators for the rural areas where only one is needed, and will be accepting applications right up to Friday night when a class for enumerators will be held.

Disabled Band Together

Persons injured in industrial accidents have formed a society to seek "fair and equitable" treatment from the B.C. Workmen's Compensation Board.

Seventeen persons became registered members of the new society tentatively named Society for Protection of Disability Rights of B.C. at a meeting in Victoria Tuesday night.

A statement said the group's name will no be confirmed until registered under the rules of the B.C. Societies Act.

Art Chief Named

The Art Gallery of Greater Victoria has appointed former British newsman Maurice Chazottes to the position of business administrator.

Chazottes will be responsible for the non-artistic aspects of the gallery's administration including the building and grounds.

He came to Canada in 1957. In recent years he has been editor of the provincial government Hansard.

9 IN MEMORIAM

AITCHISON — In loving memory of my dear sister, Iris Josephine who passed away Sept. 7, 1971.
Too far away for sight or speech,
But not too far for thought or reach.
Sweet to remember her who once was here
And who, though absent, is just as dear.
—Sadly missed by brother Jimmy, Sylvia and Family.

9 IN MEMORIAM

AITCHISON — In loving memory of a dear sister, Iris, who passed away Sept. 7, 1971.
In the blessed land called Heaven,
I pray we once more be United as we were on earth,
For all eternity.
—Always remembered by Ann, Ken and family.

AITCHISON — In loving memory of Iris, who passed away Sept. 7, 1971.
Not dead to us who loved her,
Not lost, but gone before;
She lives with us in memory
And will forever more.
—Always remembered by sister Patsy, Geno and the boys.

Nobody announced it, few noticed it and the public didn't care about it—but a major change in Canadian programming has occurred during the Russia-Canada hockey series.

Victoria Cablevision Ltd., and presumably Vancouver Cable as well, has blacked out reception of each game on Channel 11. This results from a specific request made by B.C. Television, owner of Channel 6 in Victoria and Channel 8 in Vancouver, to put into effect a Canadian Radio-TV Commission rule that cable firms delete simultaneous U.S. shows to protect the local station.

The public didn't care because the games were either on Channels 2 and 6 or Channels 6 and 8. However, I think the time will come when the public will lose something it wants and holler when it's too late.

BUREAU OF USELESS INFORMATION: Wednesday's answer—From television of a fair number of years ago come two Jays; to wit, Jay North who had the title role in Dennis the Menace, and Jay Ward whom I will love forever for his origination of the Bullwinkle show and that finest of all villains, Boris Badenov. Right, Natasha?

Today's question is another one that should be easy for TV buffs. Name the chap who was both host of the original Price Is Right and a panelist on I've Got a Secret. Plus name Secret's other male panelist. Answers Friday.

9-6-12

"The elevators are around the corridor to the right. This has been a public service announcement."

Thursday Highlights

NEW: Maude comes to TV tonight (see below) while Doctor in the House begins a second season at 7:30 p.m. on Channel 5 and the Steve Forrest action series The Baron starts at 9:30 on Channel 13.

OLYMPICS: Channel 2 reports as usual at 1:30 p.m. while evening specials begin at 8 p.m. on Channels 2, 4 and 6. However, all these times are indefinite.

C 7:00 p.m.—Last time for the Oral Roberts London special—6.

● C 7:30—Premiere of Maude with Bea Arthur as Edith Bunker's cousin and Bill Macy as her husband. The pilot was hilarious—2.

C 8:00—KVOS completes the Billy Graham meetings—12.

C 8:30—Once again, It Was a Short Summer, Charlie Brown—7.

C 9:00—All in the Family's last rerun is Edith's sickness—2.

C 9:00—Hollywood TV Theatre reruns Young Marrieds at Play. It's about two couples and is a drama, not a comedy—9.

C 9:00—The Miss America parade. The pageant is due Saturday—11.

C 11:30—Day No. 2 of the KIRO Seattle telethon—7.

CABLE 10—7:30 p.m., new time for Rosemary Wormald's Floral Creations; 7:30, ditto for You and the Law, with the Saanich law students (a grand group); 8:00, Canadian Forces Pacific; 8:30, Project Travel; 9:00, B.C. Trails and Bud Pauls start a new season.

Thursday Movies

C 9:30 a.m.—Diane (1956 Lana Turner costume soaper). I know some viewers, male and female, who never miss a Lana Turner film—4.

12:00 noon—Forbidden (silly 1947 Tony Curtis heroics). If a Garden of Eden movie was made today, who'd play the forbidden fruit?—13.

C 12:45—Branded (1950 Alan Ladd western). Mr. Ladd was so short that John Wayne, kneeling down, could only brand his forehead—6, 8.

4:00 p.m.—Maybe I'll Come Home in the Spring (fair 1971 troubled teens drama). Sally Field, Jackie Cooper. Talent overcomes script—5.

C 4:00—See How They Run (fairish 1964 intrigue), John Forsythe, Jane Wyatt, many children. Some talent, again no script—7.

● 7:30 — On the Waterfront (superb 1954 union drama), Brando, Rod Steiger, many more. Acting, direction, script, music are all great—13.

● 9:00—The Birds (first-rate 1963 Hitchcock), Rod Taylor, Tippi Hedrin, Jessica Tandy. Better each time you see it—7.

C 9:00—The Tiger Makes Out (fairly good 1967 romance), Eli Wallach, Anna Jackson. Still another fine talent-poor script film—12.

11:00—Come Next Spring (routine 1955 soaper), Ann Sheridan—11.

C 11:30—Adam's Woman (1968 romantic drama, offbeat but all right), John Mills, Beau Bridges. Note it's on KVOS only—12.

● 11:50—Bringing Up Baby (1938 leopards comedy), Katharine Hepburn, Cary Grant. Recommended for those who dig 1930s "sophisticated" comedy—2.

10:00—Wild Is the Wind (1957 romantic drama), Anthony Quinn, Anna Magnani, Tony Franciosa. Too many gestures spoil the cinematic broth—6, 8.

Thursday Radio

6:30—As It Happens again reports on the Olympics—CBU (690).

168 CAMPERS, TRAILERS AND MOTOR HOMES

MOVING BONUS DAYS
The greatly appreciated patronage of Vancouver Island trailerites has forced us to move a short distance out of town in order to SERVE YOU BETTER.

OCTOBER 1
will see us located on a 5 acre site at 1080 GOLDSTREAM AVE. in LANGFORD where, SALES, and SERVICE, plus WINTER STORAGE will provide the most up to date R.V. centre on VANCOUVER ISLAND.
To simplify the move, our stock of new and used trailers, campers and hardtops must be reduced. That's why we're offering MOVING DAY BONUSES.

FOR EXAMPLE
72 SCAMPER model 180, fully self-contained including shower. Sleeps 6. The price — $3795. As a bonus, we'll pay sales tax and supply licence, mirrors, jacks and full propane tanks. You save $233.65.
72 TERRY 17', fully self-contained including shower. Sleeps 6, $3895. The bonus — SALES TAX, spare wheel and tire, licence, chrome mirrors, jacks, full propane tanks. You save $300.

WHAT'S MORE
We'll provide free storage until April 1st on any unit sold during MOVING - BONUS DAYS. Don't delay, visit our present sales lot and select your new trailer or camper from the greatest selection on Vancouver Island.

No Best Time

One question that turns up in my mail fairly frequently around this time of the year is when is the best time to plant daffodils. Actually, there is no "best time" for every and all circumstances. For one thing, the timing depends a lot on whether the bulbs are in the ground or out of it.

If you took up your bulbs when the leaves died down in early summer and stored them away in your basement, or if you plan on purchasing and planting new bulbs this fall, you have considerable leeway in your planting time. The daffodil is one of our most accommodating plants, and can be put in almost any time throughout the fall and early winter.

To illustrate this point, I recall one occasion some years ago when a dealer friend of mine who had a lot of unsold bulbs on his hands offered me a job lot of excellent varieties — kinds I couldn't have afforded ordinarily — at just a small fraction of their regular price.

This was in November, and because we had a spell of beastly weather around that time, I couldn't get them into the ground until just a week before Christmas. I didn't expect much in the way of flowers from such a late planting, but while the stems were a bit shorter than normal, there was nothing wrong with the flowers. The following year, the stem length and blooming time were as they should be.

If I had to plump for a specific "best" time for planting stored or purchased daffs or narcissus bulbs, I'd pick the last two weeks of September. But, as I say, any time from late August right through into December will give you flowers.

We have a somewhat different situation on our hands when the bulbs are actually in the ground. These die down and take a rest in midsummer, but the dormant period isn't very long. In many cases, particularly when there is ample moisture in the soil, they start pushing out new roots as early as August.

Once this new root action starts, it is bad business to interrupt the process by uprooting them to plant elsewhere. The bulb receives a set back which impairs seriously its ability to produce top quality blooms for at least a year. I very much prefer to take up bulbs as soon as the topgrowth dies down — certainly no later than July — before new root action commences.

Many garden books warn never to use manure in the bulb bed, the theory being that manure harbors rot organisms which attack your bulbs. I went along with this theory for a good many years becore I took the trouble to think it over, and I came to the conclusion this is a lot of nonsense. The same books that forbid manure for flower bulbs demand generous manuring for onions, and if an onion isn't a bulb I'll eat a peck of tulip bulbs with a dish or crocus corms on the side.

Far from harboring disease, well rotted manure in the planting site has an almost antibiotic effect, encouraging antibodies which attack disease organisms in the soil. I use all the old, mellow, well-rotted stuff I can get my hands on — especially spent mushroom compost when I can get it — and I haven't had a smidgin of rot troubles in my bulb beds.

While manure is a wonderful soil conditioner and invigorator, rich in hormones and enzymes and all sorts of mysterious glandular products, it isn't too well endowed with actual plant food.

While bulbs do well in soil enriched with manure alone, they do even better if a little high-phosphate fertilizer is added. For the novice, bone meal is safest, for with its very slow release of nutrients, it is almost impossible to give your bulbs an overdose.

Ammonium phosphate 11-48-0 is a lot cheaper per unit of plant food, but it is very strong, so use it sparingly not more than half a cupful per square yard of planting site.

KEW GARDENS, N.Y. — Everyone I talked to was impressed by the recent television tour of the White House, and I believe it has made a great contribution to the home because it has made people conscious of their own surroundings and furniture.

Probably no one was more influenced by the program than my own sister who lives here in Kew Gardens on Long Island. I went to her apartment on the Sunday after the White House tour, and my sister was waiting at the door to give me a guided tour.

"Thank you for coming," she said. "I'd like to show you around because I feel that's the only way people can understand our heritage."

"Well, it's awfully kind of you to let us come here, Mrs. Jaffe. Where shall we begin?"

"I think we ought to start with the East Room," she said. "We call it the East Room because it overlooks the Eighth Avenue subway and Queens Boulevard — at least it did until someone built an apartment across from us and blocked the view. The East Room was originally intended as an audience room where we could meet our in-laws, our insurance agent, and our son's teacher when he got in trouble at school.

"But now it's gradually become associated with other events. Our large receptions are held here because, as you can see, this room can hold as many as 12 people at one time."

"Would you describe some of the furniture to me?" I asked her.

"I'd be delighted. That couch over there, the one with the stuffing coming out of it, is an early Franklin D. Roosevelt period piece donated to us by Aunt Molly, who said she was going to throw it out anyway. Aunt Molly used it all during the depression and it has a great deal of historical interest.

"That lamp over there is a rare pre-Pearl Harbor Macy Basement special. It was a wedding gift donated by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Gordon, of Forest Hills, N.Y., and there are only 65,900 of them left in the United States."

"Is that the oldest thing in the house?" I asked her.

"No, the hot-water heater is the oldest thing in our house, but that's in another room."

We walked into what my sister calls the Blue Room because this is the room in the house that depresses her the most.

"There are many things in this room that do have an historical interest," she said. "That bed there, for example, is an early Truman Gimbel's four-poster, which was donated to us by the Friendly Long Island Finance Company. It was given to us on the day that Mr. Truman had a fight with a Washington music critic over his daughter's voice, so naturally it has sentimental value. Actually, it's been taken away twice, but it has always turned up again after we made the payments."

"Those are lovely paintings on the wall," I said.

"Yes, they are," Mrs. Jaffe said. "This one here, which is a snow scene, was donated by Uncle Carlton, of Brooklyn. He painted it himself and gave it to us as a present on the condition we would never sell it. There were a couple of numbers on the painting that he forgot to fill in, but otherwise it's very decorative.

"I'd like to point out one more thing, and that is our President Monroe television set, which is probably the most valuable antique in the room. The television tube for the set was made by a famous glassblower who died sometime around 1856. Every week we have someone come in to restore it. My husband believes if you have a piece of antique furniture you should never let it go."

"We're running out of time," I said. "Is there any other room you would like to show us?"

"There is the Red Room, where my 13-year-old son David holds his state receptions."

She led me toward it, but when she opened the door she slammed it closed immediately. "If I've told that damn kid once I've told him a million times to clean up his room!"

"Well, are there any other rooms in the house we could visit?"

She looked at me funnily. "What other rooms? That's all we got."

Amazing Sight

JAMES BACON

The Tom Sawyer movie is being shot in Missouri, Mark Twain's native state but, unfortunately, the author's Hannibal and the Mississippi no longer look like they did in Tom Sawyer's day.

But Frank Capra Jr. learned of the village of Arrow Rock (population 81) near Columbia. In 1835 Arrow Rock was a bustling frontier river port and then the Missouri River did a strange but not unusual thing. It flooded and changed course, leaving Arrow Rock stranded about a mile and a half from the river.

That was the end of Arrow Rock as a thriving river port. The world passed by the village and it's an amazing sight today —an authentic town that looks the same as it did 135 years ago. No Hollywood set designer could have done it better.

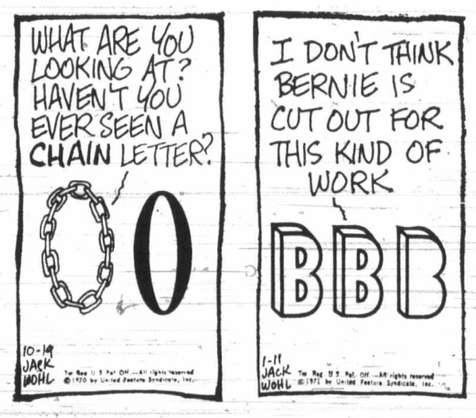

The State of Missouri has made it a state park, thus forever preserving its charm. The homes all date to this 1835 era. One of them is being used as Aunt Polly's home where Tom grows up with cousins Mary and Sidney. Another is being used as Judge Thatcher's home where Tom first glimpses Becky Thatcher and swings from his knees from a tree.

This is the first screen verion — and absolutely the first as a musical — since David O. Selznick's version in 1937 when Tommy Kelly played Tom. Earlier in the silents, Jackie Coogan did it.

This new version had been kicking around studios for several years, first at Warners and then with others. Richard and Robert Sherman wrote the screenplay as well as the music.

Then Producer Arthur Jacobs heard some of the music and immediately got rights to the script. He got financing from United Artists and The Reader's Digest, which had long been considering making an entry into family filmmaking.

The Child Lives On

In every adult there lives a child; the residual deposit of his earliest years abide forever.

In some, the child who lives on is still a spoiled brat who refuses to face up to adult responsibilities. These persons can be expected to remain argumentative, dependent, insecure forever. Their childishness will always overwhelm their adult potential.

In others, there can still be seen traces of what might be called "childful" rather than childish, patterns of behavior — inquisitive openness, naive, untamed minds and hearts still growing and questing.

Some adults are still eager explorers of new worlds, full of unanswered questions, seeking resolution. Forever, they want to get the "hang of things." Forever, they will pursue the rainbow at the edge of the horizon.

The most interesting adults are those in whom the child and the man merge and meet. It is exciting to be with those in whom we can feel the fused presence of both the youngster and the grown-up.

Make no mistake: the more genuinely mature a man, the more he will allow himself to remain, in many basic ways, a child. Indeed, his maturity helps him feel at home with those who are still children.

He never becomes estranged from the growing edges of life, from the joyous world of naive openness, nor so "sophisticated" that he cannot enjoy the simple, unadorned beauties of sun, sea, stars or sand.

He will be serious about life, but this does not close out playful joys and the natural receptivity to unbridled, unprogrammed happiness.

As long as a man's spirit is "down to earth," his feet will always be on the ground. He destroys his human possibilities, has "no leg to stand on" when he loses touch with his own history.

Plain of Jars in Turmoil

CIA Works in Silence

VIENTIANE (UPI) — U.S. officials Wednesday imposed an information blackout on an operation by units of a mercenary army, trained and paid by the American Central Intelligence Agency.

The units had come under heavy counter attack by North Vietnamese troops north of the Plains of Jars in northern Laos.

American embassy officials who monitored the fighting closely responded with a terse "no comment" to all enquiries about developments in the Second Military Region which includes the Plain of Jars area.

Reports from Vang Vieng, the military headquarters town about 60 miles north of Vientiane, said reinforcements were being moved into the area by air.

Reliable sources said the brunt of the North Vietnamese counterattack came against units operating near the northwestern rim of the Plain of Jars, an area of rolling countryside surrounded by rough jungled mountains about 100 miles north of Vientiane.

As many as 2,400 of the "irregulars" were believed involved in the battle on the government side, while an estimated two North Vietnamese regiments have been reported to the northeast and northwest of the plain.

The operation, commanded by Hill tribe Gen. Vang Pao, kicked off Aug. 15 with between 6,000 and 8,000 troops of the CIA-organized and trained army being airlifted into areas ringing the plain by aircraft of Air America and U.S. Air Force helicopters based in Thailand.

Air America is a civilian organization which flies for the CIA and other U.S. government agencies in Laos.

Finance Minister Sisouk Na Champassack, who doubles as Prime Minister Souvanna Phouma's special representative for defence affairs, said the operation was aimed at interdicting and harassing North Vietnamese units to prevent attacks on the CIA base at Long Cheng, south of the Plain of Jars, during the dry season which starts in October.

Key Post Captured

SAIGON (UPI) — Communist forces, blasting through barbed wire with Bangalore torpedoes, stormed and captured a key South Vietnamese hilltop post south of Da Nang Wednesday. The South Vietnamese tried to fly in reinforcements in a helicopter assault but communist gunners shot up 11 of the aircraft.

In the same sector around Que Son, North Vietnamese groops stopped three South Vietnamese drives cold, field officials said. Farther north, the communists launched heavy new attacks on South Vietnamese troops trying to retake Quang Tri City, field reports said.

Despite heavy clouds and rainstorms, B-52 bombers dropped more than 1,000 tons of explosives in support of South Vietnamese forces. The big B-52s flew their heaviest raids in the Saigon area in nearly three months, hitting communist positions between 28 and 60 miles north and northwest of the capital.

'Open Garbage the Fault'

Crows Plague Gorge

Crows are making life less than pleasant for residents of Middleton Street in the upper Gorge area, and Saanich council has been asked to do something about it.

Letters from Mr. and Mrs. John Selinger, 714 Middleton, and Mrs. A. M. Higgs, 721 Middleton, outlining the complaints, were read to Saanich council Tuesday night.

The crows, they said, dirtied cars, roofs and anything else outdoors; created undue early morning noise; attacked dogs "which are licensed and should have a right to their own backyards"; stripped fruit trees before the fruit was ready for picking.

Some neighbors dumped garbage in compost heaps which the crows promptly raided. The result was bones, fishheads, tincans and other refuse dropped by the birds in other yards.

Ald. Frank Waring agreed the crow population has certainly risen this year and noted a consequent high mortality rate among the young of other bird species. He thought perhaps there should be some crow-hunting over Chatham and Discovery Islands.

Ald. Fred Severson, however, reported a drop in the numbers of insects infesting trees, a drop that could be traced to the crows.

"Perhaps," he said, "the neighbors who put out open garbage are more at fault here than the crows."

Council ordered no direct action, but asked that a letter be sent to the complainants acknowledging the situation.

In other business, council:

- Names Ald. Alan Newberry and Edith Gunning as representatives to the Pacific Coast Centre Foundation, which seeks to convert the former Crystal Garden into a cultural and convention centre for southern Vancouver Island.

The foundation's next meeting will be held at 8 p.m. today at the home of Dr. Hugh Keenleyside, 3470 Mayfair.

- Rejected an application of Sherwood Restaurant Co. Ltd. to rezone property at 4558 Cordova Bay Road for restaurant use.
- Rejected an application by former reeve and MP George Chatterton to rezone property at 500 Normandy Road to permit storage and maintenance of equipment.
- Called for public hearings on two rezoning applications, one for property on Lochside Drive north of Cedar Hill Crossroad for equipment storage, office and shop use, the second for rezoning back to residential use property on Fairhurst Drive not needed for school use.
- Referred to suitable departments of the provincial government a complaint by D. Wallace Robb, No. 4-937 Marchant Road, over advertising at The Village Park, Feltham Road.

Provincial COURT

If a 34-year-old Colwood area man had not had a clean record for six years, Judge William Ostler said Wednesday in Victoria Provincial Court, his sentence would have been much longer than the one imposed — six months in jail and then 18 months' probation.

The man, Laurence Kenneth Rich of 1220 Goldstream, pleaded guilty on two dates in August to three charges containing a total of 10 counts of uttering forged documents, attempted uttering or false pretences in Victoria, Saanich, Esquimalt and Colwood.

Wednesday, Rich pleaded guilty to a two-count Saanich charge of false pretences. In all, he received $1,932.25 worth of goods and cash through the 12 counts, which were dated from June 15 to Aug. 12.

Ostler noted Rich had received a long term when he was 14 for attempted robbery but had no convictions since gap, the judge said, "you would have had to have a very long term."

□

Ronald Pletz, 22, of 3171 Metchosin, was sentenced by Ostler to four months in jail followed by a one-year probationary term.

Pletz pleaded guilty on two dates in August to three charges containing a total of seven counts of uttering forged documents and one of attempted uttering.

He received goods and cash worth $883.48 through the seven couits, which were dated from Aug. 4 to 12.

A suspended sentence and an eight-month probationary term were the sentence for Catherine Elizabeth Beatrice Mutter, 21, of 707 Esquimalt.

She was found guilty following a trial on a Saanich charge of false pretences laid after a worthless cheque was used July 7 to obtain a $49.95 jacket from Grafton Fraser Stores, 3651 Douglas.

In the cout section of Judge Edmond Jorrt de St. Jorre, the penalty for Carol Virginia Peace, 20, of 1321 Franklin, was a nominal one-day jail term and one year of probation.

Mrs. Peace was found guilty Aug. 16 following a trial on a four-count Victoria charge of false pretences, then pleaded guilty the same day to similar one-count charges from Victoria and Duncan.

The charges concerned worthless cheques used to obtain goods and cash worth $230 and were dated from May 13 to July 7.

□

In traffic court, two persons pleaded guilty before Judge Harold Alder to separate charges of impaired driving. Victor Oliver Bradly Berg, 42, of 723 Field, stopped Aug. 11 in the Colwood area, was fined $350 while David Alexander Coulter, 22, of 641 Esquimalt, stopped Aug. 29 in Oak Bay, was fined $300.

Two Dead In Crash

CLINTON (CP) — Two persons are dead following a car-truck crash four miles south of here. RCMP said both victims are B.C. residents but did not release any names. The accident occurred during a heavy rain.

Lawsuit Plans In Air

Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi said Tuesday he hasn't decided whether to proceed with his libel suit against the Vancouver Province and a Toronto Star reporter.

Questioned on his way to a cabinet meeting, Gaglardi would only say he'd discuss the matter laer with his lawyer.

The minister is suing Toronto Star reporter Chris Dennett, Pacific Press Ltd., Province publisher Paddy Sherman and Province reporter Peter McNelly.

The libel suit is over statements attributed to Gaglardi on the question of Premier Bennet's leadership of the Social Credit party.

U.S. Court Martial

No Death Penalty In Fragging Case

FT. ORD, Calif. (UPI) — The court martial of Pte. Billy D. Smith, the first GI to be tried in the United States for a "fragging" incident in Vietnam, began Wednesday with a ruling that he cannot be sentenced to death.

Tight security surrounded the military court. A band of protesters demonstrated outside the gates of this training camp on the coast of central California, but the court martial began without incident.

Smith pleaded not guilty to all charges.

Col. Rawis Frazier, the bespectacled judge presiding at the general court martial in a converted firehouse, ruled out the death penalty on a motion by Smith's defence attorney, Luke McKissack of Los Angeles.

McKissack argued that the June 29 decision of the U.S. Supreme Court declaring the death penalty "cruel and unusual" punishment should be applied to military as well as civilian cases.

He cited the fact that the last time the death penalty was carried out by the military was in 1961 on a soldier convicted of a rape committed seven years earlier in Korea.

Capt. Craig Casey, 28, Portland, Ore., the prosecutor, argued that high court's decision did not apply to military justice.

Some of Smith's family of 11 brothers and sisters and his parents were among the 22 spectators in the well-guarded courtroom. They smiled and nodded to each other at the decision.

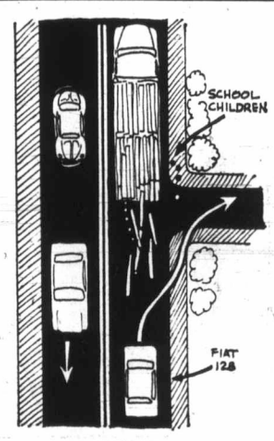

Strict security was clamped on the base for the trial. Spectators were met by a military policeman at the gate, frisked and checked electronically for metal.

ATTENTION!
DEFENSIVE DRIVERS

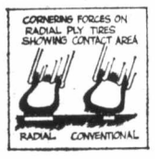

If you are a DEFENSIVE DRIVER then you'll be familiar with the fact that most Auto Accidents are Avoidable in over 90% of cases. A defensive driver takes caution and remains alert for situations that could cause an accident. But what happens when you're faced with a sudden emergency, one of those freak incidents. Let's take this case for example:

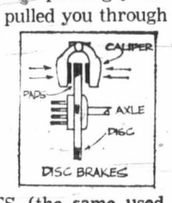

You are driving along a two-lane highway, the roads are wet, a lumber truck is ahead of you at five car lengths. You are both travelling at 50 m.p.h. Suddenly many lengths of lumber fall from the truck. You swerve to avoid the obstacles and you must hit the shoulder. However, you see ahead school children walking along on the shoulder so you must turn down the side road to avoid the children.

This could be the makings of a tragic accident! At BRIAN HOLLEY MOTORS we feel that you probably would have avoided an accident if you were driving a FIAT 128 SEDAN or STATION WAGON!

When the lumber fell in front of your FIAT 128 first you would have swerved to avoid the debris . . . because of FIAT'S RACK AND PINION STEERING. The steering would be quick and precise. (This is the same steering used on hi-speed race cars.) To ensure your car will follow the steering on a wet road FIAT'S standard RADIAL PLY TIRES with their more superior drainage than conventional tires. Despite the rain you would still have excellent traction instead of the usual hydroplaning effect which leaves you skimming over a sheet of water.

In addition to this, FIAT'S FRONT WHEEL DRIVE also greatly adds to your traction. Instead of your car's rear wheels pushing your car through this high speed manoeuvre, your FIAT pulled you through by the front "steering" wheels.

Now that you've safely avoided the lumber and your FRONT WHEEL DRIVE is tracking straight and true through the gravel, to avoid hitting the child on the shoulder you must negotiate the turn on to the side road. With FIAT's DISC BRAKES (the same used on aircraft) you were able to slow down your speed in the short distance without locking your wheels which will cause uncontrolled skidding. Now with your excellent cornering capabilities afforded by FULL INDEPENDENT SUSPENSION, FRONT WHEEL DRIVE and RADIAL PLY TIRES you would have been able to negotiate that corner that you thought you would have needed a sports car to do!

COULD YOU HAVE AVOIDED THIS ACCIDENT IN YOUR PRESENT CAR?

Drop in and test drive a Fiat 128 Sedan or Wagon and get a free chance on winning $5.00 cash or a trip to Rome. Draws weekly.

Charisma Battle Begins

Party Heads Sail Forth To Hustings

By STEWART MacLEOD

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal party leaders are wasting no time in getting out on the hustings for the Oct. 30 general election. By next Tuesday, the campaign will be in full swing.

David Lewis, leader of the New Democratic Party, will be the first off the mark with his "national media tour" which begins Monday in Vancouver. From then until Sept. 16, he will be travelling from coast-to-coast, taking part in radio shows, interviews and news conferences.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Trudeau will start his campaign Tuesday at his own nominating meeting in the Montreal riding of Mount Royal. The next day he will be in the London, Ont., area, returning to Quebec on Friday, and spending the following day in Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island.

So far, Trudeau's itinerary is not detailed — except for the provinces he will be visiting. Officials said Wednesday that details probably will be released on the Friday preceding the following week's schedule.

Progressive Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield also begins his campaign Tuesday with his nominating convention in Halifax. The following day he will be in Yarmouth and Sydney, N.S., flying to Winnipeg on Thursday and spending Friday in Brandon, Man., and Regina. He will be in Saskatchewan and Alberta Saturday, in British Cllumbia Monday and may visit the Northwest Territories before returning to Ottawa Sept. 20.

Stanfield will be in Toronto Sept. 21, in Quebec the following day and in New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland Sept. 23.

Like Trudeau, the Conservative leader has no detailed itinerary for his travels yet. However, both are setting coast-to-coast targets in their initial week of campaigning.

Trudeau plans to be in Ontario Sept. 19-20. He is scheduled to be in Manitoba and Saskatchewan Sept. 22, and the following day he will be in British Columbia.

He will travel in Alberta Sept. 26, and go on to Saskatchewan and Manitoba the following day before visiting Ontario Sept. 29 and Quebec Sept. 30.

After Lewis completes his media tour, he will spend the rest of September in central Canada before launching his coast-to-coast campaign. His media tour will take him to Vancouver Sept. 10-11, Edmonton Sept. 12, Saskatoon Sept. 13, Toronto Sept. 14, St. John's Nfld., Sept. 15, Halifax and Sydney Sept. 16.

Social Credit Leader Real Caouette has decided that his campaign will officially begin Sept. 18 with a speech in Shawinigan, Que., although he plans on campaigning in Alberta two days prior to this.

He will be in British Columbia Sept. 18-20, in Alberta for the following two days, in Saskatchewan Sept. 23-24 and in Manitoba Sept. 25-26, before going on to Toronto and the Ontario centres of Kapuskasing, Timmins and Kirkland Lake in the next three days. After that he will be in Quebec until Oct. 13 when he begins a tour of the Maritimes.

Trudeau, as he did in 1968, is chartering an Air Canada DC-9 for his campaign and this time Stanfield is doing the same thing. In 1968 the Conservative leader travelled in an older piston-engine aircraft.

Lewis will be going most of his campaigning in a twin-engine turbo-prop plane while Caouette will be flying on scheduled airlines.

Wagner Meets 'Chief'

OTTAWA (UPI) — Claude Wagner, a former Quebec liberal justice minister who has announced his candidacy for the Conservative party, held meetings Wednesday with Conservative leader Robert Stanfield and former Prime Minister John Diefenbaker.

Diefenbaker, who kept the former judge well beyond the originally scheduled 10-minute courtesy call, said "I'm tremendously impressed by him.

"We had a fruitful, delightful discussion concerning a number of matters of fruitful importance," the former prime minster said, chuckling over the vagueness of his statement.

Wagner said he planned to spend as much time as possible travelling throughout the whole of Quebec for the Conservative party and even some other parts of the country.

He said the Conservatives will be campaigning on issues such as where the present Liberal government has failed in such areas as unemployment, inflation and its fight against poverty.

Wagner said he had chosen a riding — one that is representative of all the different people who live in Quebec so it will not be the town of Mont Royal, he said.

Sinden Somewhat Perplexed

Canadians Miss Chances, Wilt

By IAN MacLAINE

WINNIPEG (CP) — Russia's ability to turn Canadian manpower plays to their advantage in Wednesday night's 4-4 tie with Team Canada left Canadian coach Harry Sinden somewhat perplexed.

"They always seem to have a man deep when they're killing penalties," Sinden said in a post-game interview of goals by Vladimir Petrov and Valery Khariamov that enabled the speedy Russians to pull out the tie.

That, and the superb goaltending of 20-year-old Vladislav Tretiak, deadlocked the eight-game exhibition hockey series at one game each and a tie with game four in Vancouver Friday night.

"It was no different than the first two games." Sinden observed. "They made certain plays out of their own end that just seemed to click."

Sinden, who has developed a lot of respect for the Russian team in the three games, said the Canadians missed several opportunities to wrap the game up while leading 4-2 when Phil Esposito missed "a couple of good shots and then Frank Mahovlich walked in and missed."

When Paul Henderson had his point-blank shot from close in gloved "by a guy (Tretiak) who's not supposed to have a good glove," the Canadians seemed to wilt early in the third period.

With the Russians continually pressing, it was Tony Esposito's opportunity to rise to the occasion and the younger brother of highscoring Phil Esposito repelled the visitors in the final 20 minutes.

One of the big differences in the Soviet offence Wednesday was the appearance of their kid line, seeing action on the Canadian tour for the first time.

The trio of 21-year-olds, Vyacheslav Anisin, Alexander Bodunov and Yuri Lebedev, more than made up for the benching of seasoned veterans Eugeny Zimin and Yuri Blinov.

Lebedev and Bodunov scored the third and fourth Russian goals late in the second period and free-wheeled

Virgin Islands

Snipers Kill Eight

CHRISTIANSTED, St. Croix, V. I. (UPI) — Eight persons, four of them tourists, were shot to death Wednesday at the plush Fountain Valley Golf Course near this small Virgin Islands city when two men opened fire with automatic rifles.

Residents of the island were ordered to remain indoors as police reinforcements from neighboring islands were flown in to help in a manhunt for the two killers.

According to some witnesses, the men picked off their victims both inside and outside the clubhouse with high-powered rifles from a clump of bushes.

Another unofficial version said the men first demanded money and when they did not get it, they opened fire with automatic rifles.

Gov. Melvin Evans, who Wednesday was elected vice chairman of the southern governors' conference in South Carolina, flew home late Wednesday after he was advised of the slayings.

The shooting took place in mid-afternoon at the course, which is owned by the Rockefeller family and considered one of the 12 finest golf courses in the U.S. The links are about eight miles west of Christiansted, the principal city of the island with a population of about 3,000. St. Croix is the largest of the U.S. Virgin Islands.

Police fanned out over the island late Wednesday and the public safety department asked the government of Puerto Rico and police from nearby St. Thomas for aid. Police helicopters were being flown from Puerto Rico. St. Croix's police force normally numbers 100.

Christiansted was virtually closed down under a state of emergency. All public places, including restaurants and movie theatres, shut their doors for the night.

Lt. Gov. David Maas went on television shortly after the shooting to urge Virgin Island residents to help in the capture of the two men by supplying any information that might lead to their arrest.

Police said the gunmen apparently were two fugitive wanted for some time.

A spokesman said they were believed to have fled toward the hilly central spine of the island and it was feared that if they were not apprehended before morning, they could hole up in a remote, uninhabited region indefinitely.

Bomb Kills Woman, Mobs Loot

BELFAST (UPI) — Gunmen bombed the Belfast home of a prominent Roman Catholic politician early Thursday morning, killing a woman in the house. Residents in other sections of the city found the bodies of two executed men.

The three deaths brought to 552 the number of persons killed in three years of violence in Northern Ireland. The toll includes 384 civilians, 122 British soldiers, 21 militiamen and 25 policemen.

The army said a duffle bag packed with explosives was flung from a car at the front door of the home of James O'Kane, chairman of Northern Ireland's Republican Labor Party, in the mixed Catholic-Protestant Antrim Road district.

O'Kane's wife Josephine and their four children escaped injury but Bridget Green, a Catholic housewife and relative of the O'Kanes, died in the blast which caused extensive damage to the front of the house, an army spokesman said. O'Kane was not home.

Protestant mobs early Thursday looted shops and stoned British troops and Catholic homes in Belfast, spokesmen said.

Other mobs hurled stones and bottles at army patrols in the districts and through windows of isolated Catholic homes there.

Residents in the Catholic Falls Road area said an unidentified body was dumped from a passing car into an alley there. Troops called to the scene said the man had been shot in the head.

Police said another unidentified man was later found dying from gunshot wounds in the Protestant Woodstock Road area of the capital.

On Wednesday a man was killed in a bomb blast touched off despite reports the Irish Republican Army provisional wing might stop bombings.

Also on Wednesday, a "spigot bomb" fired by shotgun at British soldiers went wild and exploded in an area used by some spastic and paraplegic patients on the grounds of Belfast's Royal Victoria Hospital. No one was injured.

Thousands in Kampala

Asians Line Up for Canada

KAMPALA, Uganda (UPI) — Thousands of Asians lined up outside Canada's temporary immigration office Wednesday when it opened its doors to prospective immigrants.

About 2,000 Asians waited for forms on which to apply for Canadian residence. Most of them were young people, many holding degrees or professional qualifications.

Zavie Levine, special assistant to Canada's minister of manpower and immigration, said Canada would accept all those Asians who could satisfy the immigration selection criteria. These are based on such things as age, educational and occupational qualifications and "immigrant suitability," he said.

Near the Canadian office, a much shorter line waited for British entry permits at the British commission's emergency processing office in the same building. Only about one in six were British passport holders. The others in line were either Ugandan citizens, or Asians whose Ugandan citizenship had been revoked.

The Ugandan citizens of Asian descent said they wanted to leave because they felt that they were no longer wanted in Uganda.

Speaking to a group of visiting Scandinavian newsmen, the Zambian president said, "What is happening in Uganda is very shameful not only for Africa, but for the rest of the world."

Dredger Sinks, Sixteen Drown

HELSINKI (UPI) — A 60-year-old dredging vessel capsized and sank early Wednesday during a storm in the Gulf of Bothnia, trapping most of the sleeping crew of 20 below decks, the coast guard said.

Authorities said 16 of the crewmen were feared dead. The dredger Nostaja went down so fast that only four men woke up and were able to escape and swim ashore.

Rescue ships found two bodies during the day but the 14 others were feared to have been trapped inside the dredger which sank in more than 30 feet of water.

"We have lost all hope of finding any of the 14 alive. The dredger went down in two minutes and apparently took all of them down," a spokesman of the coast guard said.

Divers tried to get down to the dredger but rough seas prevented their attempts all through the day, the spokesman said.

Hurricane Brewing

MIAMI (UPI) — Tropical storm Dawn, fourth of the season, developed Wednesday out of a depression drifting northeastward off the Cape Kennedy spaceport and forecasters said it would become a hurricane on Thursday.

"Highest sustained winds are 50 miles per hour near the centre but will gradually increase as the storm becomes a hurricane," a late advisory from the National Hurricane centre said.

Koreans To Quit Vietnam

SEOUL (UPI) — South Korea will withdraw all of its 37,000 soldiers from South Vietnam starting in December, a high-ranking foreign ministry official said Thursday.

The official said South Korea informed the Saigon government Wednesday of the withdrawal plan, which was completed after full consultations with the United States.

He said the troop pullout plan is final and would not be modified. He did not say how long it will take to complete the withdrawal.

The official said Lt. Gen. Lee Sae-Ho, commander of the Korean forces in South Vietnam, is working on the government plan. The exact time schedules will be set on recommendations from Lee.

The official said South Korea made the decision in the belief that the South Vietnamese forces are strong enough to withstand any North Vietnamese offensive.

"We believe they do not need our help any longer. They proved their self-defensive capabilities last spring when they successfully repelled the communist offensive," he said.

Heart-Lung Program Set

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A three-year, $1.3 billion program to fight heart and lung disease was given final congressional approval Wednesday. The Senate passed the measure providing for programs for diagnosis, prevention and treatment of diseases of the heart, lungs, the blood and blood vessels.

Angry Israelis Sit on Their Hands

MUNICH — This Olympic city joined a shocked world in honoring 11 dead Israelis Wednesday.

Then it hastened back to the playing field, trying to forget an Olympian tragedy.

Bright sunshine filtered through the modernistic plastic roof of the Olympic Stadium as some 80,000 Germans, led by their president and chancellor, filed solemnly in for the memorial ceremony designed to write "finis" to the incredible and almost unbelievable happenings which started at dawn Tuesday.

When the Tuesday tragedy ended, 17 persons lay dead, including a West German policeman and five of eight Arab Terrorists. All but two of them died in a blaze of gunfire in the darkness at the airport of Fuerstenfeldbrueck, some 30 miles west of Munich.

The tragedy remained clouded in doubt as to why the Germans took such risks with innocent lives. But nothing clouded the sentiments which rang through the stadium Wednesday.

"Hate only destroys," cried West German president Gustav Heinemann. "In the name of the German government, I appeal to all people: Help us to overcome hate."

Not far away, at No. 31 Connollystrasse in the Olympic Village, three bouquets of flowes marked the scene where eight members of the Palestinian Black September organization broke in at dawn, killing two Israelis outright and holding nine hostages for 17 hours.

The Israelis, about 40 strong, filed into the place of honor on the stadium turf. Many were weeping openly, and one girl had to be supported.

They joined in the applause when President Heinemann said Arab countries who support terrorists must share the blame for this tragedy, the worst ever to befall the Olympic Games.

But they sat on their hands, and anger blazed in the eyes of some, as Olympic committee president Avery Brundage declared, "The games must go on!"

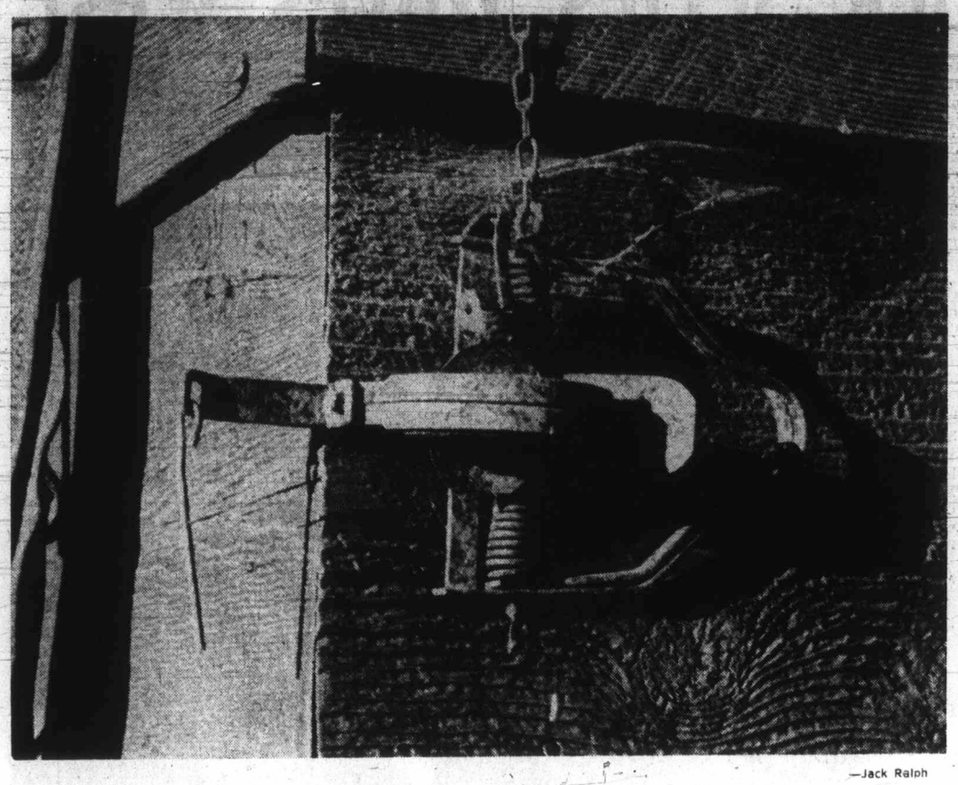

Israel, Egypt and Syria pulled out of the games Wednesday, the Egyptians saying they were doing so for their own security. But their flags were among those of 121 nations which flew at half mast at the stadium.

A few hours later, the games were resumed — but not until a bomb scare forced officials to clear and search the hall where a handball match between Romania and Hungary was due to take place. The games will now finish Monday, one day behind schedule.

A full day after the chaos and confusion ended in guns-

Harbor Vision Dimmed By Nanaimo Planners

By FRED CURRIE
Colonist Correspondent

NANAIMO — The proposed expansion of Nanaimo harbor may have suffered its first major setback at the hands of the city's Advisory Planning Commission.

The commission has recommended that the project be turned down. No details were given by commission chairman Frank Hodgson regarding the decision. The recommendation arose from a study of the harbor project conducted by commissioner Dick Weismiller.

The development would see the present two berths at the assembly wharf here expanded to five in number and the harbor dredged to a depth of 45 feet to accommodate ships up to about 30,000 tons deadweight.

In addition, a major forest products terminal and several new industries plan to locate at the dock if the project goes ahead.

Its total cost is estimated at between $20 million and $30 million when completed in about three years.

He said Wednesday he would wait and see what city council does with the planners' decision before making any comment on the recommendation.

Mayor Frank Ney is known to strongly support the development but other members of council have not as yet taken a definite stand on the issue.

In a preliminary report last month, federal Environment Minister Jack Davis said he favored moving the port facilities from the present location at the estuary of Nanaimo River to a point outside the present harbor limits.

City council now has the planning commission's report in the committee stage and is studying it.

The proposed harbor plan has also drawn consistent fire from the Concerned Citizens Committee of Nanaimo, mainly on ecological grounds.

Hawthorn Heights Issue Reheats

NANAIMO — The controversy which surrounded a proposed high desnity housing development in the Hawthorn Heights district of Nanaimo about a year ago has flared up again.

The developers of the project, Explorer Developments Limited of Victoria, have submitted a new plan to the city in accordance with instructions given the company after new legislation was passed by the provincial government this spring.

The company had applied for a development permit but, after a stormy controversy over several months, the project was turned down by city council on a vote of four in favor and three against.

Legislation at that time required a two-thirds majority be obtained to pass on such matters.

However, the legislation was amended during the last session of the provincial house so that now a simple majority is all that is needed.

In a presentation to the city's advisory planning commission late Tuesday night, Hawthorn Heights resident Fred Douglas accused the group of having contempt for the resident taxpayers and of not consulting with the people of the area to determine their feelings about a development, but accepting only the "promoters word for it."

He said he takes "strong exception to the undemocratic processes used by the commission."

Another area resident, Art Lionel, told the commission that the project represents bad planning.

"You need not look beyond the lack of road access to the area and the shortage of school facilities to see this," he said.

The project, which combined low-rise and high-rise multi-residential units, would house about 800 people if completed.

Lionel said a new 10-class room school would be needed for the people living in the project alone.

Also, he suggested that high-rise development should take place in the downtown section of any city and not in what he called the "quiet an scenic outskirts where people are living to get away from the cramped and noisy surroundings."

He added that if the city approved the project, it could look forward to a net annual loss of $36,000 on the property over what would be realized through taxation of single family dwellings.

He explained the loss by saying that the project would increase the population of the city by five per cent but would only add two per cent to the total city assessment.

Runaway Truck Kills Man

ISLAND DIGEST

CAMPBELL RIVER — RCMP here Wednesday disclosed the death of 48-year-old Courtenay logger Clifford Wade who died last Friday under the wheels of a runaway logging truck.

Police said the loaded vehicle, driven by the dead man's brother Robert and also containing Gregory Brooks, was heading downhill on a private road at Wilborne Channel in the southeast portion of Forward Harbor.

The driver was unable to stop the truck after it jumped out of gear, police said, and told the passengers to jump from the truck.

Clifford Wade jumped first, followed by Brooks and his brother. But he fell against a steep bank on the right side of the vehicle, bounced back under the rear wheels of the truck and was crushed. The other two were unhurt.

VICTORIA — Two freighters jammed together since colliding in Juan de Fuca Strait south of Victoria Sunday were separated Wednesday night after crews worked all day with cutting torches. The Liberian-registered Aegean Sea was taken under tow to drydock in Esquimalt while the Seattle-based C. E. Dent proceeded under its own power to Victoria's Ogden Point docks.

□

PORT ALBERNI — About 100 members of several unions made tentative plans Wednesday to march on Victoria early next week in protest of delays in payment of federal unemployment insurance benefits, according to John Squire, financial secretary of the Port Alberni local of the IWA.

□

PARKSVILLE — Brian Ernest Giles, 18, of Parksville, and two mainland men were remanded to Nov. 22 for trial at Castlegar Wednesday after they appeared in court there charged with cultivating marijuana. No pleas were entered and the charges were laid after an Aug. 22 raid in which 136 pounds of the plant were seized.

□

NANAIMO — Robert Stove, 21, of Nanaimo, charged with attempted murder following the stabbing of an RCMP constable here has been classified as unfit to stand trial and transferred to Riverview Mental Hospital. He was charged Aug. 1 after Constable Patrick Laturnus was stabbed while accompanying a man he had arrested to a police car.

CAMPBELL RIVER — Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Hay, 40, and 17-year-old Robert Baskin were remanded Wednesday in court here to next Wednesday when they will enter pleas on charges of obstruction following a demonstration at Campbell River high school's registration day Tuesday.

Police Frustrated by Double-Murder Mystery

Did 'Bible Freak' Suicide?

RCMP officers investigating the Radar Beach double murder have had 76 frustrating days searching for a "Bible freak" who could be dead somewhere in the bush.

Creally said Wednesday no trace had been found of the man charged with the double shooting tragedy — American-born Joseph Henry Burgess, 25, alias "Job Week" a known "Bible freak."

RCMP "wanted" bulletins have stretched across North America trying to locate Burgess, whose home town is Jersey City, N.J.

He is wanted on a charge of non-capital murder in the deaths of Anne Barbara Durant, 22, of Vancouver and Lief B. Carlsson, 22, of Sweden, whose bullet-riddled bodies were found June 22 in a lean-to shelter on Radar Beach, about five miles south of Tofino in Vancouver Island's rugged west coast.

Burgess with and without beard

Creally said that the suspect could have committed suicide and might be "lying somewhere in the bush."

Eight RCMP officers staged surprise raids on hippie settlements in the Bamfield area last week in an effort to flush out Burgess, who they thought could still be in the remote area.

The raids were made in the Ki Bay area and during the day mounties talked with about 40 transients camped in an assortment of shacks and lean-tos for the summer.

The result was a blank and Creally admits he finds the lack of information about Burgess whereabouts or movements "surprising."

One theory competing with the feeling that he is dead is that he could be sheltering somewhere along the West Coast Lifesaving Trail which stretches from Port Renfrew to Bamfield.

Checks with hikers using the trail have produced no clues.

Another theory has Burgess in Europe or "somewhere else abroad."

Creally said that even though the suspect had a few days start on police something would usually have been heard by now.

"I haven't quite experienced this in my career at all. We gave it as good or better coverage in North America as in any case I've been associated with.

"It's unusual not to come up with something," he said.

And he added that if Burgess wasn't dead he'd obviously gone to "great trouble to disguise himself to avoid detention."

RCMP investigation is continuing with checks on former friends of Burgess, places where he has worked and soft drug users, as the suspect was known to have used marijuana and hashish.

Shifts Protested

CROFTON — Over 50 parents attended a meeting Wednesday night at Crofton elementary school to protest a shift system implemented at the school.

The meeting, chaired by director of elementary education, Bob Moss, was dominated by the varied opinions of the parents and resentment that a classroom shortage exists.

Grade six and seven students began school Wednesday on morning and afternoon shifts, which the school board estimates will continue until Easter when a new classroom pod is expected to be completed. The senior grades were on shift last year also because of the shortage.

The pod was expected to be completed in time for the school year, but labor strife held up progress.

After listening to alternatives to having the students on shift, the parents voted to have the board rent Crofton community hall, which borders the school property. The dining area of the hall could be rented for approximately $40 monthly, and used as a temporary classroom.

Moss will take the decision with him to the next board meeting for consideration.

North Cowichan Commemorates Slain Olympians

NORTH COWICHAN Council began its Wednesday afternoon meeting with a minute of silence in memory of the Israeli athletes and others who were murdered by terrorists during the Olympic Games at Munich Tuesday. Mayor Gerry Smith described the act as a crime "against the entire world community, throwing a shadow across the Games which were originally intended to bring together nations rather than divide them into hateful political camps."

Ald. Tom Burge, who lost part of his eyesight in the last war, presented a $50 cheque on behalf of the Sir Arthur Pearson Association for War Blinded to Larry Scharschmidt, 19, of Crofton, who suffers from a sight impairment. Burge said the young man was chosen on behalf of his association by the Canadian National Institute for the Blind.

He said the money will help Scharschmidt to further his training to become a horticulturist at the Vancouver Vocational School. In reference to his association Burge said "this organization is shrinking in numbers and the happy part is that we are not getting new members." He explained that his association set up a fund to assist young men and women who also lost part or all of their sight.

The provincial pollution control board will be advised that council is unhappy with the operation of the Slegg Brothers' sawmill in the Cowichan Bay area and that North Cowichan is objecting to an application by that company to dump hog fuel in the mill area. The mayor explained that the Pollution Control Board forwards such applications to the respective communities asking for comment.

Council has made it clear on previous occasions that the operation of that sawmill leaves much to be desired. Burge, chairman of the North Cowichan pollution control committee, noted that his committee already objected to the operation two years ago.

Another operation, Vancouver Island Processing, in the Westholme area for whom a permit is also pending, received a clean bill of health from council. Ald. Donald Morton remarked that this particular operation always has been a "model citizen" and not very many people had been aware of its existence even after the initial months of operation several years ago.

UVic Campus Turned Into Game Board

Line Up Everybody—Play Registration!

By BILL THOMAS
Colonist Reporter

It is, someone said, like playing a combination of Monopoly, Snakes and Ladders and bluff poker.

And to make matters even more interesting, there are computers involved.

It began Tuesday when second-year students lined up for hundreds of yards outside the old airplane hangar that serves most of the year as a gym, but for this week looks like a combination stock exchange and casino.

By Friday it is expected 5,000 students will have been processed.

The blue cardmanship ploy now begins. A student arrives at Station 1. Here he must show a yellow computer card with his name and registration number, but he must also have a course-planning form and a pink admission form.

Clutching a copy of the UVic calendar of courses and a timetable and a sheaf of cards and documents, the youth in search of learning now gets to Station 2.

If he is a new student, he has to scan a long list of names to see if his is included in those who have passed the English qualifying exam.

Station 5, however, is real. Here the academic traveller gets an IBM name card and a library card that also serves as his Alma Mater identification card.

With this stuff and the mounting documentation he has picked up, he moves to Station 8, where little desks are set up for the student to prepare his timetable.

In the journey from Station 7 to Station 8, lasting friendships have been formed, because there is a continual stream of men and women students grovelling between the desks looking for bits of paper or cards they have dropped.

One young man remarked, "Last year it was first year registration and I lost my course planning form and this really great girl found it for me and we have been going steady ever since. We just got back from Europe."

Station 8 provides the supreme moment of gamesmanship, because the student has to try to balance what he wants to take with what's available and what doesn't conflict with his timetable.

Departments have faculty members at desks who attempt to match course-planning forms compiled by students to the courses offered, and timing is the important factor.

A student may find the chemistry course he wants conflicts with the poetry elective he has planned, and that he has to take elementary Japanese because the lectures fall in the only time slot he has vacant.

Each faculty member at Station 9 issues a computer card to the student that matches the course number on his planning sheet as it is finally approved.

It doesn't often happen, but university officials say it could happen that a student who had decided on a course program early in the year could find himself doing something quite different.

From Station 9, the weary student moves to Station 10, where he is required to furnish more personal data. As a concession to fatigue, Station 11 offers desks for this filling-out process.

The student gives up his IBM name card, his IBM course card and his personal data card. He is checked to see that he has filled out all the forms.

The game card has a specific warning, repeated seven times: "Once you leave the gym you may not re-enter for any reason whatsoever."

Way Cleared for Motel Complex Despite Courtenay Public Protest

COURTENAY — Despite the objections of a group of residents in the Ryan Road area, the way has been cleared for construction of a motor motel-convention centre.

Mexicanna Inns had asked council to enter into a land use contract to permit construction of a 50-unit motel, convention centre with tennis courts, pool and other facilities. Council agreed to the request this week.

Resident of the area attended a public meeting held two weeks ago and voiced strong opposition to the plan. At city council meeting this week some 30 residents turned up again to voice concern over encroaching commercialism in an area which they said they wanted to keep solely residential.

Bill Edwards told council he had never heard one sound argument from the company which would benefit or enhance the city. He said the people who live in residential areas such as the Ryan and back roads, must make sure such commercial developments are not "the thin edge of the wedge."

Edwards asked council, "By going ahead with the development are you willing to be the five or six gentlemen who ruined that side of the city?" He said he had voted in favor of coming into the city boundaries four years ago because he was told it would be the best way to protect development of the area through trust in council actions. The area is zoned R-2 development area, which requires council approval and a public meeting before any development can take place.

Edwards told council that he had derived no benefits, and increased taxes for his effort.

Another resident, Charles Locke, asked council "What does the city gain by putting a hotel there?" He said it was his feeling that council was "All in favor of the hotel." Locke suggested the area might want to "get out of" the city boundaries.

Mayor Bill Moore said the amount of taxes which would accrue from construction of the hotel should not be the prime consideration but added he was in favor of expansion of this type in the community. He added he would vote against a request for a 30 day suspension of the matter telling the delegation that council must decide on the merits of the matter. "The future of Courtenay lies in three things," Moore said. "Conventionism, tourism and construction of homes for the elderly." Moore added the only contentious point was "where."

A beer parlor, which would be part of the hotel complex also came in for a roasting but representatives of the company present at the council meeting said financing was not available unless a beer parlor was included.

Later in the council meeting a bylaw authorizing the city to enter into a land use contract was read for the third time.

Before the vote was taken Ald. Bob McPhee expressed his feeling by saying he agreed with the delegation that construction "would be the thin edge of the wedge." He said he associated a shopping centre with the motel complex and asked "where do we stop?"

McPhee suggested that council should make it clear "and possibly go on record" as opposed to the shopping centre.

Ald. Gordon Wagner appeared to agree with McPhee and said development has already gone too far and a stop must be made. Wagner said "It's time we damn well got a city plan." He later voted in favor of the bylaw for the land use.

The development company, in entering the land use contract with the city must abide by many regulations including proof of ownership of property and inclusion of certain aspects of the construction in the first phase.

Hospital Project Step Nearer

CAMPBELL RIVER — When tenders are opened Sept. 22 for $2 million of construction at Campbell River hospital, the project will see completion of phase two in the two-phase expansion program.

Art Lightfoot, administrator, reported this week that permission has been received to call the tenders.

The number of patients admitted continues to show an increase with Lightfoot reporting 1,713 patients in the hospital in the first six months of the year.

Other hospitals in the Comox Valley also continue to report heavy patient loads.

At St. Joseph's in Comox, figures released by the hospital show that at the end of July last year the percentage of occupancy for the first seven months stood at 87.14 per cent but in 1972 the figure rose to 88.69 per cent.

The number of births and deaths was down but the total number of days stay for adults and children rose from 13,837 to 14,199. The number of day care patients also rose significantly.

In Cumberland the number of patients admitted in the first seven months was down fractionally as was the number of patient days, the average length of stay as well as the percentage of occupancy. The number of both minor and major operations showed an upward trend.

Off Stage, Bastion's Problems Knotty

By ERITH SMITH
Colonist Reporter

When a theatre company announces its program of plays for the coming season there is scant public knowledge or appreciation of the problems encountered in setting up the program.

One factor for example:

Edwin Stephenson has just returned to Victoria to direct Bastion Theatre's plays for winter and spring. One play he hopes to offer in March is the English comedy, How the Other Half Loves.

This play, now enjoying an extended run in London's West End starring Robert Morley, will later go on tour to New York, Toronto and other U.S. centres.

While in London this summer, Stephenson went to the head office of Samuel French Ltd. to seek the performing rights.

"Bastion Theatre," Stephenson reminded them, "is in Victoria — 3,000 miles from New York and almost as far from Toronto."

It didn't seem to make much difference. Sale of the rights to New York apparently included all of North America, and the vast distances and lack of overlap didn't seem to register.

However, Stephenson is still negotiating, and still hoping.

The young director has had a busy year. Immediately at the close of the last season here, in mid-March, he left for New Brunswick to direct Fredericton Playhouse's Philadelphia, Here I Come, in which Victoria's Ramona McBean had a featured role.

Then it was back to Toronto to audition for the Fredericton three-month summer season — three plays in three months.

In between, Stephenson sandwiched his "holidays" — three weeks in London during which he saw 23 plays.

In Victoria he's already hard at work helping in the sale of season tickets for Bastion's shows. This type of sale, he says, doubled attendance this summer at the Fredericton performances.

Opening Nov. 17 at the McPherson Playhouse will be You Know I Can't Hear You When the Water's Running.

Tom Kneebone, well-known Canadian theatrical and television actor, is coming to take the lead in Where's Charley? — the hilarious musical version of Charley's Aunt, opening Dec. 26.

A Canadian comedy, Maybe We Can Get Some Bach, directed by Peter Mannering and with a cast of about 24, will open Jan. 19 in Bastion's Studio Theatre.

To keep the laughter rolling, George Bernard Shaw's "women's lib" comedy, Mrs. Warren's Profession, will open Feb. 16.

Final play, set for March 9, will hopefully be the one Stephenson is negotiating for in London. Failing that, he's considering one of Noel Coward's brittle comedian for the season closer.

Bastion Plans Auditions

Two sets of auditions for Bastion Theatre enterprises will take place this month.

Colin Gorrie, artistic director of Bastion Studio Company and Theatre School, will audition and hold interviews for the Studio Company Monday and Tuesday, Sept. 11 and 12, from 1 to 3 p.m. and 7 to 9 p.m. at the studio theatre, 538 Yates.

Auditions for Edwin Stephenson's mainstage season will take place Saturday and Sunday, Sept. 23 and 24, from 7 to 11 p.m. in the old courtroom in the Maritime Museum Building, Bastion Square.

Those auditioning may, if they wish, bring their own material or music.

No Best Time

One question that turns up in my mail fairly frequently around this time of the year is when is the best time to plant daffodils. Actually, there is no "best time" for every and all circumstances. For one thing, the timing depends a lot on whether the bulbs are in the ground or out of it.

If you took up your bulbs when the leaves died down in early summer and stored them away in your basement, or if you plan on purchasing and planting new bulbs this fall, you have considerable leeway in your planting time. The daffodil is one of our most accommodating plants, and can be put in almost any time throughout the fall and early winter.

To illustrate this point, I recall one occasion some years ago when a dealer friend of mine who had a lot of unsold bulbs on his hands offered me a job lot of excellent varieties — kinds I couldn't have afforded ordinarily — at just a small fraction of their regular price.

This was in November, and because we had a spell of beastly weather around that time, I couldn't get them into the ground until just a week before Christmas. I didn't expect much in the way of flowers from such a late planting, but while the stems were a bit shorter than normal, there was nothing wrong with the flowers. The following year, the stem length and blooming time were as they should be.

If I had to plump for a specific "best" time for planting stored or purchased daffs or narcissus bulbs, I'd pick the last two weeks of September. But, as I say, any time from late August right through into December will give you flowers.

We have a somewhat different situation on our hands when the bulbs are actually in the ground. These die down and take a rest in midsummer, but the dormant period isn't very long. In many cases, particularly when there is ample moisture in the soil, they start pushing out new roots as early as August.

Once this new root action starts, it is bad business to interrupt the process by uprooting them to plant elsewhere. The bulb receives a set back which impairs seriously its ability to produce top quality blooms for at least a year. I very much prefer to take up bulbs as soon as the topgrowth dies down — certainly no later than July — before new root action commences.

Many garden books warn never to use manure in the bulb bed, the theory being that manure harbors rot organisms which attack your bulbs. I went along with this theory for a good many years becore I took the trouble to think it over, and I came to the conclusion this is a lot of nonsense. The same books that forbid manure for flower bulbs demand generous manuring for onions, and if an onion isn't a bulb I'll eat a peck of tulip bulbs with a dish or crocus corms on the side.

Far from harboring disease, well rotted manure in the planting site has an almost antibiotic effect, encouraging antibodies which attack disease organisms in the soil. I use all the old, mellow, well-rotted stuff I can get my hands on — especially spent mushroom compost when I can get it — and I haven't had a smidgin of rot troubles in my bulb beds.

While manure is a wonderful soil conditioner and invigorator, rich in hormones and enzymes and all sorts of mysterious glandular products, it isn't too well endowed with actual plant food.

While bulbs do well in soil enriched with manure alone, they do even better if a little high-phosphate fertilizer is added. For the novice, bone meal is safest, for with its very slow release of nutrients, it is almost impossible to give your bulbs an overdose.

Ammonium phosphate 11-48-0 is a lot cheaper per unit of plant food, but it is very strong, so use it sparingly not more than half a cupful per square yard of planting site.

Art Buchwald

Thanks for Coming

So exhausted from the excitement of the Republican National Convention that the doctor advised him to take a rest, Buchwald is leaving behind some of his doctor's all-time favorites.

KEW GARDENS, N.Y. — Everyone I talked to was impressed by the recent television tour of the White House, and I believe it has made a great contribution to the home because it has made people conscious of their own surroundings and furniture.

Probably no one was more influenced by the program than my own sister who lives here in Kew Gardens on Long Island. I went to her apartment on the Sunday after the White House tour, and my sister was waiting at the door to give me a guided tour.

"Thank you for coming," she said. "I'd like to show you around because I feel that's the only way people can understand our heritage."

"Well, it's awfully kind of you to let us come here, Mrs. Jaffe. Where shall we begin?"

"I think we ought to start with the East Room," she said. "We call it the East Room because it overlooks the Eighth Avenue subway and Queens Boulevard — at least it did until someone built an apartment across from us and blocked the view. The East Room was originally intended as an audience room where we could meet our in-laws, our insurance agent, and our son's teacher when he got in trouble at school.

"But now it's gradually become associated with other events. Our large receptions are held here because, as you can see, this room can hold as many as 12 people at one time."

"Would you describe some of the furniture to me?" I asked her.

"I'd be delighted. That couch over there, the one with the stuffing coming out of it, is an early Franklin D. Roosevelt period piece donated to us by Aunt Molly, who said she was going to throw it out anyway. Aunt Molly used it all during the depression and it has a great deal of historical interest.

"That lamp over there is a rare pre-Pearl Harbor Macy Basement special. It was a wedding gift donated by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Gordon, of Forest Hills, N.Y., and there are only 65,900 of them left in the United States."

"Is that the oldest thing in the house?" I asked her.

"No, the hot-water heater is the oldest thing in our house, but that's in another room."

We walked into what my sister calls the Blue Room because this is the room in the house that depresses her the most.

"There are many things in this room that do have an historical interest," she said. "That bed there, for example, is an early Truman Gimbel's four-poster, which was donated to us by the Friendly Long Island Finance Company. It was given to us on the day that Mr. Truman had a fight with a Washington music critic over his daughter's voice, so naturally it has sentimental value. Actually, it's been taken away twice, but it has always turned up again after we made the payments."

"Those are lovely paintings on the wall," I said.

"Yes, they are," Mrs. Jaffe said. "This one here, which is a snow scene, was donated by Uncle Carlton, of Brooklyn. He painted it himself and gave it to us as a present on the condition we would never sell it. There were a couple of numbers on the painting that he forgot to fill in, but otherwise it's very decorative.

"I'd like to point out one more thing, and that is our President Monroe television set, which is probably the most valuable antique in the room. The television tube for the set was made by a famous glassblower who died sometime around 1856. Every week we have someone come in to restore it. My husband believes if you have a piece of antique furniture you should never let it go."

"We're running out of time," I said. "Is there any other room you would like to show us?"

"There is the Red Room, where my 13-year-old son David holds his state receptions."

She led me toward it, but when she opened the door she slammed it closed immediately. "If I've told that damn kid once I've told him a million times to clean up his room!"

"Well, are there any other rooms in the house we could visit?"

She looked at me funnily. "What other rooms? That's all we got."

Amazing Sight

JAMES BACON

The Tom Sawyer movie is being shot in Missouri, Mark Twain's native state but, unfortunately, the author's Hannibal and the Mississippi no longer look like they did in Tom Sawyer's day.

But Frank Capra Jr. learned of the village of Arrow Rock (population 81) near Columbia. In 1835 Arrow Rock was a bustling frontier river port and then the Missouri River did a strange but not unusual thing. It flooded and changed course, leaving Arrow Rock stranded about a mile and a half from the river.

That was the end of Arrow Rock as a thriving river port. The world passed by the village and it's an amazing sight today —an authentic town that looks the same as it did 135 years ago. No Hollywood set designer could have done it better.

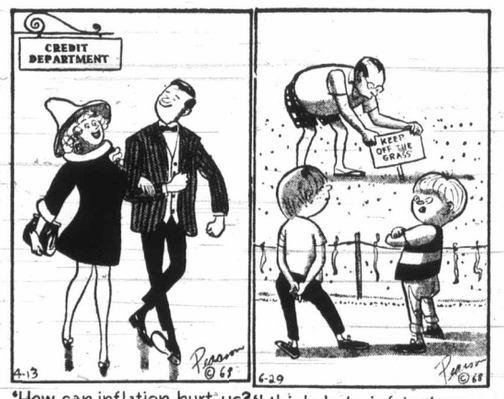

The State of Missouri has made it a state park, thus forever preserving its charm. The homes all date to this 1835 era. One of them is being used as Aunt Polly's home where Tom grows up with cousins Mary and Sidney. Another is being used as Judge Thatcher's home where Tom first glimpses Becky Thatcher and swings from his knees from a tree.

This is the first screen verion — and absolutely the first as a musical — since David O. Selznick's version in 1937 when Tommy Kelly played Tom. Earlier in the silents, Jackie Coogan did it.

This new version had been kicking around studios for several years, first at Warners and then with others. Richard and Robert Sherman wrote the screenplay as well as the music.

Then Producer Arthur Jacobs heard some of the music and immediately got rights to the script. He got financing from United Artists and The Reader's Digest, which had long been considering making an entry into family filmmaking.

The Child Lives On

In every adult there lives a child; the residual deposit of his earliest years abide forever.

In some, the child who lives on is still a spoiled brat who refuses to face up to adult responsibilities. These persons can be expected to remain argumentative, dependent, insecure forever. Their childishness will always overwhelm their adult potential.

In others, there can still be seen traces of what might be called "childful" rather than childish, patterns of behavior — inquisitive openness, naive, untamed minds and hearts still growing and questing.

Some adults are still eager explorers of new worlds, full of unanswered questions, seeking resolution. Forever, they want to get the "hang of things." Forever, they will pursue the rainbow at the edge of the horizon.

The most interesting adults are those in whom the child and the man merge and meet. It is exciting to be with those in whom we can feel the fused presence of both the youngster and the grown-up.

Make no mistake: the more genuinely mature a man, the more he will allow himself to remain, in many basic ways, a child. Indeed, his maturity helps him feel at home with those who are still children.

He never becomes estranged from the growing edges of life, from the joyous world of naive openness, nor so "sophisticated" that he cannot enjoy the simple, unadorned beauties of sun, sea, stars or sand.

He will be serious about life, but this does not close out playful joys and the natural receptivity to unbridled, unprogrammed happiness.

As long as a man's spirit is "down to earth," his feet will always be on the ground. He destroys his human possibilities, has "no leg to stand on" when he loses touch with his own history.

Sinden Somewhat Perplexed

Canadians Miss Chances, Wilt

By IAN MacLAINE

WINNIPEG (CP) Russia's ability to turn Canadian manpower plays to their advantage in Wednesday night's 4-4 tie with Team Canada left Canadian coach Harry Sinden somewhat perplexed.

"They always seem to have a man deep when they're killing penalties," Sinden said in a post-game interview of goals by Vladimir Petrov and Valery Kharlamov that enabled the speedy Russians to pull out the tie.

That, and the superb goaltending of 20-year-old Vladislav Tretiak, deadlocked the eight-game exhibition hockey series at one game each and a tie with game four in Vancouver Friday night.

"It was no different than the first two games," Sinden observed. "They made certain plays out of their own end that just seemed to click."

Sinden, who has developed a lot of respect for the Russian team in the three games, said the Canadians missed several opportunities to wrap the game up while leading 4-2 when Phil Esposito missed "a couple of good shots and then Frank Mahovlich walked in and missed."

When Paul Henderson had his point-blank shot from close in gloved "by a guy (Tretiak) who's not supposed to have a good glove," the Canadians seemed to wilt early in the third period.

With the Russians continually pressing, it was Tony Esposito's opportunity to rise to the occasion and the younger brother of highscoring Phil Esposito repelled the visitors in the final 20 minutes.

One of the big differences in the Soviet offense Wednesday was the appearance of their kid line, seeing action on the Canadian tour for the first time.

The trio of 21-year-olds, Vyacheslav Anisin, Alexander Bodunov and Yuri Lebedev, more than made up for the benching of seasoned veterans Eugeny Zimin and Yuri Blinov.

Lebedev and Bodunov scored the third and fourth Russian goals late in the second period and free-wheeled

Virgin Islands

Snipers Kill Eight

CHRISTIANSTED, St. Croix, V. I. (UPI) — Eight persons, four of them tourists, were shot to death Wednesday at the plush Fountain Valley Golf Course near this small Virgin Islands city when two men opened fire with automatic rifles.

Residents of the island were ordered to remain indoors as police reinforcements from neighboring islands were flown in to help in a manhunt for the two killers.

According to some witnesses, the men picked off their victims both inside and outside the clubhouse with high-powered rifles from a clump of bushes.

Another unofficial version said the men first demanded money and when they did not get it, they opened fire with automatic rifles.

Gov. Melvin Evans, who Wednesday was elected vice chairman of the southern governers' conference in South Carolina, flew home late Wednesday after he was advised of the slayings.

The shooting took place in mid-afternoon at the course, which is owned by the Rockefeller family and considered one of the 12 finest golf courses in the U.S. The links are about eight miles west of Christiansted, the principal city of the island with a population of about 3,000. St. Croix is the largest of the U.S. Virgin Islands.

Police fanned out over the island late Wednesday and the public safety department asked the government of Puerto Rico and police from nearby St. Thomas for aid. Police helicopters were being flown from Puerto Rico. St. Croix's police force normally numbers 100.

Christiansted was virtually closed down under a state of emergency. All public places, including restaurants and movie theatres, shut their doors for the night.

Lt. Gov. David Maas went on television shortly after the shooting to urge Virgin Island residents to help in the capture of the two men by supplying any information that might lead to their arrest.

Police said the gunmen apparently were two fugitives wanted for some time.

A spokesman said they were believed to have fled toward the hilly central spine of the island and it was feared that if they were not apprehended before morning, they could hole up in a remote, uninhabited region indefinitely.

Koreans To Quit Vietnam

SEOUL (UPI) South Korea will withdraw all of its 37,000 soldiers from South Vietnam starting in December, a high-ranking foreign ministry official said Thursday.

The official said South Korea informed the Saigon government Wednesday of the withdrawal plan, which was completed after full consultations with the United States.

He said the troop pullout plan is final and would not be modified. He did not say how long it will take to complete the withdrawal.

The official said Lt. Gen. Lee Sae-Ho, commander of the Korean forces in South Vietnam, is working on the government plan. The exact time schedules will be set on recommendations from Lee.

The official said South Korea made the decision in the belief that the South Vietnamese forces are strong enough to withstand any North Vietnamese offensive.

"We believe they do not need our help any longer. They proved their self-defensive capabilities last spring when they successfully repelled the communist offensive," he said.

Heart-Lung Program Set

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A three-year, $1.3 billion program to fight heart and lung disease was given final congressional approval Wednesday. The Senate passed the measure providing for programs for diagnosis, prevention and treatment of diseases of the heart, lungs, the blood and blood vessels.

Bomb Kills Woman, Mobs Loot

BELFAST (UPI) — Gunmen bombed the Belfast home of a prominent Roman Catholic politician early this morning, killing a woman in the house. Residents in other sections of the city found the bodies of two executed men.

The three deaths brought to 552 the number of persons killed in three years of violence in Northern Ireland. The toll includes 384 civilians, 122 British soldiers, 21 militiamen and 25 policemen.

The army said a duffle bag packed with explosives was flung from a car at the front door of the home of James O'Kane, chairman of Northern Ireland's Republican Labor Party, in the mixed Catholic-Protestant Antrim Road district.

O'Kane's wife Josephine and their four children escaped injury but Bridget Green, a Catholic housewife and relative of the O'Kanes, died in the blast which caused extensive damage to the front of the house, an army spokesman said. O'Kane was not home.

Protestant mobs early today looted shops and stoned British troops and Catholic homes in Belfast, spokesmen said.

An estimated 1,000 Protestants roamed through the predominantly Protestant eastern and northern sections of the capital during the night. Some mobs looted shops, smashing their windows to get at the merchandise.

Other mobs hurled stones and bottles at army patrols in the districts and through windows of isolated Catholic homes there.

Residents in the Catholic Falls Road area said an unidentified body was dumped from a passing car into an alley there. Troops called to the scene said the man had been shot in the head.

Police said another unidentified man was later found dying from gunshot wounds in the Protestant Woodstock Road area of the capital.

On Wednesday a man was killed in a bomb blast touched off despite reports the Irish Republican Army provisional wing might stop bombings.

Also on Wednesday, a "spigot bomb" fired by shotgun at British soldiers went wild and exploded in an area used by some spastic and paraplegic patients on the grounds of Belfast's Royal Victoria Hospital. No one was injured.

Thousands in Kampala

Asians Line Up for Canada

KAMPALA, Uganda (UPI) Thousands of Asians lined up outside Canada's temporary immigration office Wednesday when it opened its doors to prospective immigrants.

About 2,000 Asians waited for forms on which to apply for Canadian residence. Most of them were young people, many holding degrees or professional qualifications.

Zavie Levine, special assistant, to Canada's minister of manpower and immigration, said Canada would accept all those Asians who could satisfy the immigration selection criteria. These are based on such things as age, educational and occupational qualifications and "immigrant suitability," he said.

Near the Canadian office, a much shorter line waited for British entry permits at the British commission's emergency processing office in the same building. Only about one in six were British passport holders. The others in line were either Ugandan citizens, or Asians whose Ugandan citizenship had been revoked.

The Ugandan citizens of Asian descent said they wanted to leave because they felt that they were no longer wanted in Uganda.

Speaking to a group of visiting Scandinavian newsmen, the Zambian president said. "What is happening in Uganda is very shameful not only for Africa, but for the rest of the world."

Dredger Sinks, Sixteen Drown

HELSINKI (UPI) A 60-year-old dredging vessel capsized and sank early Wednesday during a storm in the Gulf of Bothnia, trapping most of the sleeping crew of 20 below decks, the coast guard said.

Authorities said 16 of the crewmen were feared dead. The dredger Nostaja went down so fast that only four men woke up and were able to escape and swim ashore.

Rescue ships found two bodies during the day but the 14 others were feared to have been trapped inside the dredger which sank in more than 30 feet of water.

"We have lost all hope of finding any of the 14 alive. The dredger went down in two minutes and apparently took all of them down," a spokesman of the coast guard said.

Divers tried to get down to the dredger but rough seas prevented their attempts all through the day, the spokesman said.

Hurricane Brewing

MIAMI (UPI) — Tropical storm Dawn, fourth of the season, developed Wednesday out of a depression drifting northeastward off the Cape Kennedy spaceport and forecasters said it would become a hurricane by today.

"Highest sustained winds are 50 miles per hour near the centre but will gradually increase as the storm becomes a hurricane," a late advisory from the National Hurricane centre said.

MUNICH — This Olympic city joined a shocked world in honoring 11 dead Israelis Wednesday.

Then it hastened back to the playing field, trying to forget an Olympian tragedy.

Bright sunshine filtered through the modernistic plastic roof of the Olympic Stadium as some 80,000 Germans, led by their president and chancellor, filed solemnly in for the memorial ceremony designed to write "finis" to the incredible and almost unbelievable happenings which started at dawn Tuesday.

When the Tuesday tragedy ended, 17 persons lay dead, including a West German policeman and five of eight Arab terrorists. All but two of them died in a blaze of gunfire in the darkness at the airport of Fuerstenfeldbrueck, some 30 miles west of Munich.

The tragedy remained clouded in doubt as to why the Germans took such risks with innocent lives. But nothing clouded the sentiments which rang through the stadium Wednesday.

"Hate only destroys," cried West German President Gustav Heinemann. "In the name of the German government, I appeal to all people: Help us to overcome hate."

Not far away, at No. 31 Connollystrasse in the Olympic Village, three bouquets of flowes marked the scene where eight members of the Palestinian Black September organization broke in at dawn, killing two Israelis outright and holding nine hosages for 17 hours.

The Israelis, about 40 strong, filed into the place of honor on the stadium turf. Many were weeping openly, and one girl had to be supported.

They joined in the applause when President Heinemann said Arab countries who support terrorists must share the blame for this tragedy, the worst ever to befall the Olympic Games.

But they sat on their hands, and anger blazed in the eyes of some, as Olympic committee president Avery Brundage declared, "The games must go on!"

Israel, Egypt and Syria pulled out of the games Wednesday, the Egyptians saying they were doing so for their own security. But their flags were among those of 121 nations which flew at half mast at the stadium.

A few hours later, the games were resumed — but not until a bomb scare forced officials to clear and search the hall where a handball match between Romania and Hungary was due to take place. The games will now finish Monday, one day behind schedule.

Air Charters:

Scrupulous Firms' Image Suffers

From Bucket Shop Operators' Antics

By RAY DYKES
Colonist Reporter

The air charter business in Canada has been hijacked by a miserable public image and Victoria area charter consultants feel they have been unjustly linked to it.

And what the charter industry is struggling against is the barrage of abuse from the 2,500 Canadians currently stranded in Europe because of the failure of charter flights.

The cause is a string of what the trade terms "bucket shop" charter operations by unscrupulous men out to swindle and run.

So far 12 charter flight information firms have folded in Toronto alone this year. Toronto police are looking for six of the 12 owners who appear to have skipped with the loot.

The bucket shops are conveniently outside federal jurisdiction and there are no provincial regulations preventing them from operating as they please.

Their ploy is to offer travellers low-cost, one-way tickets to Europe with vouchers which are to be redeemed for return tickets at an agency at some European point.

Unfortunately all too often the agency does not exist and travellers are forced to try to jam themselves into regularly scheduled flights — a bonus for major international airlines.

But company failures and bucket shops have yet to make their mark in western Canada.

Some charter flight referral agents suspect other operators of running these shops and will tell you so openly.

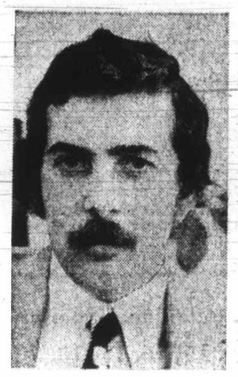

In Victoria, only one charter agency has closed in recent months and that was Piccadilly Travel. As far as can be determined, the firm shut down simply because it couldn't make enough money.

Victoria city police's fraud squad has had no complaints about the closed charter agency and others operating now in the city.

This fact, coupled with the knowledge that the Victoria Better Business Bureau has never had a complaint about any of the city's charter firms, is why local firms feel they don't deserve the bad image lumped on the industry in general.

However, Victorians have been among the thousands of Canadians stranded in Europe this summer.

Local charter people say the trouble begins when passengers "trying to save a few bucks" deal with other than Canadian licensed air charter companies. Flights from Seattle are usually outside the protective curtain of Canadian regulations.

Wheaton
. . . clean, open shop

The principals of three of Victoria's major charter flight firms — Peter Wheaton of Charter Flight Consultants, Tom Woodward of Four Seasons Travel and Joan Hughes, secretary of Charter Flight Discount Club — say that none of their passengers has been stranded.

If flights don't fill as expected, alternatives are arranged or ticket money refunded.

And if you are particularly nervous about the money you have invested in a ticket he'll give guarantees in writing that you won't lose any of it.

But he warns that, because of the nature of the business, normal flight timetables and guarantees are hard to give.

"I'd be foolish and underhanded if I assured a client everything was going to happen exactly as planned," he said. There are certain problems a charter flight consultant can't ignore and chief among these is that the aircraft has to be full or it won't make the trip.

Wheaton also points out that charter agents have to be careful whom they let their clients fly with. He sticks to Canadian licensed carriers because he says "if there's any possibility of shady deals going on, I won't touch that flight with a barge pole."

Despite the difficulty in giving guarantees, Wheaton said 95 per cent of his clients get what they want and the others are offered alternate flights.

Stuck to Tom Woodward's office wall at Four Seasons Travel, a string of postcards bear testimony to happy flights made by his clients.

Woodward, who also runs a branch office in Duncan as well as full travel services, said there were no Victorian passengers stranded anywhere with Canadian air charter companies.

He will quote figures saying 52 per cent of Canadians flying the transatlantic route do so on charter flights.

Air charter firms get the ticket money 60 days before the flight, according to Canadian Transport Commission regulations, and have to put it in a trust account. They draw 50 per cent when the flight reaches Europe and the rest when the passengers are safely back in Canada.

But the cash is gathered well before 60 days in some cases by club secretaries organizing the trip and charter flight agents and is not protected until it reaches the airline trust accounts.

Currently in B.C. some of the major charter flight agents are trying to form their own policing body through provincial legislation and a group they hope to call the B.C. Charter and Group Travel Organization.

Wheaton said the aims of the body would be:

- Compulsory bonding of all charter flight agents to give passengers protection against company collapses;
- A code of ethics for the charter agents;
- Provincial legislation to close up loopholes which allow anybody to start up a charter flight agency without financial backing.

The charter flights agents involved number about 12 of the almost 100 in the province but Wheaton said he hoped the idea would catch on and show the public that the industry was genuinely interested in policing itself.

New Rules

Recent new Canadian Transport Commission regulations are aimed at making it tough for "bucket shop" charter organizations.

In future charters:

- The carrier must prove it has been paid for both the outgoing and return portion of the trip;
- It must investigate every passenger to make sure he is a member in good standing of the charter organization;
- It must undertake to fly back only those passengers it started out with; and
- The airline is required to make up a passenger manifest showing all passengers along with their home address, their passport numbers and nationality and deliver it immediately after the flight returns.

Strike Looms

Deadlock Facing Theatres

British Columbia may be headed for a strike that would close most of its movie theatres.

However, union officials say there is no immediate plan to act on a vote by projectionists that favors strike action by a margin of 93 per cent if a new contract can't be worked out.

Another meeting between Local 348 of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Moving Picture Machine Operators and Odeon and Famous Players Theatres is scheduled for Vancouver Friday in an attempt to break a deadlock.

Most Theatres

The two chains cover the vast majority of theatres in the province, according to the union. Local 348 takes in some 160 projectionists across B.C.

A. E. McManus of Vancouver, president of the local, told the Colonist the only theatres in the Greater Victoria area not involved in contract talks are the Fox Cinema, Oak Bay Theatre and the Gem Theatre in Sidney.

He said the union was hopeful of avoiding a strike but maintained the strike vote was not just an idle threat.

Definite Vote

"It was a very definite strike vote," he said. "We haven't had a strike since 1937, so you can see we don't rush into these things."

McManus declined to give details of the projectionists' demands, but said the union has sought a three-year agreement.

This would replace the three-year agreement that expired June 30.

McManus said the sides were "quite a distance apart" where demands are concerned.

He said about 70 B.C. theatres would be closed down in the event of a strike. All but "a couple or so" would be affected in Vancouver.

The strike 35 years ago lasted only two or three days, McManus said.

Naturalists Plan Trip

The junior branch of the Victoria Natural History Society will commence fall activities Saturday with a field trip to Mt. Douglas Park. Members and friends will meet at Mayfair bowling lanes parking lot at 1:30 p.m.

Collision Under Investigation

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

Two freighters that had remained locked in rigid embrace for 67 hours following a collision at sea were separated at 8:30 p.m. Wednesday without apparent mishap.

It took repeated efforts of men, tugboats and various equipment, along with a number of failures before the American-owned C. E. Dant and the Liberian freighter Aegean Sea were pulled apart in Parry Bay, a mile off Weir's Beach.

The Aegean Sea, with a gaping hole where the other ship had been wedged in its side, was taken under tow to Esquimalt Graving Dock. The C. E. Dant sailed to Ogden Point under its own steam and tied up for the night.

Earlier it had been indicated that the 12,300-ton American vessel, owned by States Steamships of San Francisco, would proceed to Seattle.

This ship and the 9,000-ton Aegean Sea collided on calm but fog-covered seas about 20 miles out of Victoria in Juan de Fuca Strait at 1:30 a.m. Monday. The collision, which occurred in Canadian waters, is the subject of a preliminary investigation by the federal transport department.

Fortunately the bow had struck No. 2 hold which was empty of fuel. However, the job of separating the ships was hazardous because of the fact that the adjoining No. 3 hold contained fuel.

Tugboats were unable to separate the vessels at sea. They were towed into Parry Bay Tuesday. Plans to use work crews with cutting torches had to be called off Tuesday night because of 35-knot winds.

During the night the ballast was shifted in the C. E. Dant in hope that the bow would rise sufficiently to allow it to be pulled free from the other ship.

By daybreak Wednesday they were still wedged together and eight boilermakers went to work with their cutting torches. At 4 p.m. two tugboats of Seaspan International Ltd., Sudbury II and the Seaspan King, failed in an attempt to pull them apart.

During the day precautions were taken in case of an oil spill. A fisheries patrol vessel and Coast Guard cutter were on the scene.

The collision has renewed the call for action from those who say shipping is posing a threat to the B.C. coastal environment. Victoria MP David Groos wants Canada and the U.S. to work out an agreement that would dictate stringent controls for shipping in Juan de Fuca Strait.

B.C. Liberal Leader David Anderson will refer to the latest accident in his U.S. court fight to block an oil tanker route from Alaska to Washington.

Search for 'Bible Freak' Murder on Investigators

RCMP officers investigating the Radar Beach double murder have had 76 frustrating days searching for a "Bible freak" who could be dead somewhere in the bush.

Creally said Wednesday no trace had been found of the man charged with the double shooting tragedy American-born Joseph Henry Burgess, 25, alias "Job Week," a known "Bible freak."

RCMP "wanted" bulletins have stretched across North America trying to locate Burgess, whose home town is Jersey City, N.J.

He is wanted on a charge of non-capital murder in the deaths of Anne Barbara Durrant, 22, of Vancouver and Lief B. Carlsson, 22, of Sweden, whose bullet-riddled bodies were found June 22 in a lean-to shelter on Radar Beach, about five miles south of Tofino in Vancouver Island's rugged west coast.

Creally said that the suspect could have committed suicide and might be "lying somewhere in the bush."

Eight RCMP officers staged surprise raids on hippie settlements in the Bamfield area last week in an effort to flush out Burgess, who they thought could still be in the remote area.

The raids were made in the Ki Bay area and during the day mounties talked with about 40 transients camped in an assortment of shacks and lean-tos for the summer.

The result was a blank and Creally admits he finds the lack of information about Burgess whereabouts or movements "surprising."

One theory competing with the feeling that he is dead is that he could be sheltering somewhere along the West Coast Lifesaving Trail which stretches from Port Renfrew to Bamfield.

Checks with hikers using the trail have produced no clues.

Another theory has Burgess in Europe or "somewhere else abroad."

Creally said that even though the suspect had a few days start on police something would usually have been heard by now.

"I haven't quite experienced this in my career at all. We gave it as good or better coverage in North America as in any case I've been associated with.

"It's unusual not to come up with something," he said.

And he added that if Burgess wasn't dead he'd obviously gone to "great trouble to disguise himself to avoid detention."

RCMP investigation is continuing with checks on former friends of Burgess, places where he has worked and soft drug users, as the suspect was known to have used marijuana and hashish.

Region Board Debates Recycle Depot Aid

Efforts intensified Wednesday to keep one of Western Canada's most successful recycling operations from closing down later this month.

The Capital Regional Board's committee of the whole ordered a report prepared on the feasibility of the board's taking over the Saanich-based Project Recycle.

The board's engineers will compile the report and have it completed within two weeks.

At the same committee meeting regional board officials heard a letter written Aug. 25 by then opposition leader Dave Barrett, expressing concern over the anticipated closure of Project Recycle.

Barrett's letter said that the operation should receive provincial support, but that "no such help can be expected from the Social Credit government."

Regional board officials also indicated that interim grants may be authorized to keep the project going.

They told the meeting that the project would have to be phased out by Sept. 15 because there wasn't adequate funding to continue.

Ted Knowles, one of the originators of the project, said the operation had been so successful that volunteer help was no longer able to cope with it.

The recycling service, he said, would have to be operated on a municipal or regional basis.

The project began about two years ago with the help of a federal Opportunities for Youth grant.

A number of Greater Victoria councils have already gone on record in favor of continuing the program. Saanich is considering a $5,000 grant to prevent scrapping of the project.

During the past 20 months, Project Recycle has collected and re-sold hundreds of tons of glass, newspapers, cardboard, tin cans, aluminum and household fats.

According to estimates, about 5 per cent of Greater Victoria's population is actively involved in the recycling program.

Project co-ordinators say that a massive program of information and education would soon convert most of the population to the recycling idea, which involves separation of wastes in the homes.

The project operates out of a central depot, an old warehouse at Borden and McKenzie, which it leases from the municipality of Saanich for a nominal fee.

Headline Incorrect

Due to an error in a headline in Wednesday's Colonist, it was incorrectly reported that bundled newspapers would be accepted Sunday at Project Recycle, 4026 Borden.

The depot will not be open Sunday but newspapers will be accepted from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday.

By BROCK KETCHAM
Colonist Reporter

Employees of an ambulance firm that provides emergency ambulance service to the city of Victoria have submitted an application for certification as union members, it was learned Wednesday.

At the same time, Garden City Ambulance Ltd. vice-president Neil Leard confirmed that he submitted a verbal resignation from the company about a week ago.

Seven men — including Leard, company president J. R. Knezacky and five employees — man two ambulances required under the three-year contract with Victoria which expires June 30, 1973. The company also has a third ambulance.

Douglas Beckett, who is Canadian Union of Public Employees business agent for Vancouver-based Local 873, Ambulance Employees Union, said the Garden City employees submitted an application for certification as Local 873 members last Thursday.

Beckett said the B.C. Labor Relations Board is currently investigating the application, and certification for the employees is expected within two weeks.

Asked why the employees want to become union members, Beckett said, "They're generally dissatisfied with conditions there."

Leard, who works as an ambulance attendant as well as being an official of Garden City Ambulance, declined comment on why he resigned.

The vice-president said date of termination of his employment with the company will not be decided until someone can be found to replace him.

Leard said he will be leaving his active positions as vice-president and ambulance attendant but will retain his position as a company director until he can sell his shares. The company has three shareholders.

"I'm leaving with the idea of getting out completely," Leard said. He said he has not decided what he will do after he leaves the company.

Beckett said he has talked with Garden City Ambulance officials two or three times during the past month and outlined to officials CUPE's position that Victoria-area ambulance service should be regionalized and operated on a non-profit basis.

Victoria CUPE representative Tom Smith said that after an application for certification is submitted, the government posts a notice on the employer's premises.

Smith said the employer is then given 10 days to submit a reply to the notice if he wishes.

If there is no reply, the investigating officer submits a report to the Labor Relations Board to be considered at its next meeting.

Smith said it is not normal for an application to be contested because the employer would have to prove that the number of employees applying are inappropriate for collective bargaining.

When asked about the latest developments within his company, Knezacky declined comment.
